CIO Board Indorses Truman and Barkley By Vote of 35 to 12

Calls Gov. Dewey Candidate of 'Big Business,' Scores Platform of GOP

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The CIO executive board yesterday indorsed Harry Truman for President by a vote of 35 to 12, renouncing Henry Wallace's new party for the second time in eight months.

The vote followed a day-long fight by outnumbered left-wing unionists, many of them affiliated with the Wallace group, to block CIO indorsement of any presidential candidate.

The board also indorsed Senator Alben W. Barkley, Mr. Truman's running mate, and said:

"We are conscious of the fact that the candidates of both major political parties run on, and are committed to, the platforms of their parties.

"The platform of the Democratic Party is one that can command our enthusiastic approval. The platform of the Republican Party condemns itself."

Praises Truman's Courage

The CIO resolution called Gov. Thomas E. Dewey "the candidate of Big Business." It praised President Truman's "high courage and . . . great devotion to principles" and said he "stands for and has voiced in large measure the objectives of the program to which we are committed."

President Truman meanwhile, booked a speech for September 18 at Dexter, Iowa, the scheduled start of his Western campaign tour.

Beyond a previously-announced five-city swing through Michigan on Labor Day, the President's later billings across the country were still pretty much of a secret. Mr. Truman is expected to speak at Dexter, then continue on West.

Gov. Dewey's speaking plans are likewise in the speculative stage, but there is a growing possibility the two may cross trails. Gov. Dewey reportedly plans a swing through the West, starting around September 20.

Hugh D. Scott, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, did some advance work in a 10-day Western trip and brought back this forecast:

"The Dewey-Warren tide is rolling to a November landslide of history-making proportions."

Scott said the Dewey-Warren ticket is receiving the "active support" of approximately 20 per cent of the nominal Democrats in the West. He predicted Republicans will pick up Senate seats in three Western States — Montana, New Mexico and Colorado.

Followed January Pattern

Yesterday's 35 to 12 CIO executive board vote to indorse Truman generally followed the pattern of last January's 33-to-11 CIO decision to oppose the third party.

Twelve left-wing leaders, virtually all identified with the Wal-

President Feels Treatment Violates American Fair Play

President Truman yesterday expressed his displeasure over the pelting of Henry Wallace with eggs and tomatoes in Wallace's speaking trip across North Carolina.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman felt the treatment accorded the Progressive Party candidate was "certainly a highly Un-American business and violated the American concept of fair play." He quoted the President as saying Wallace is entitled "to say his piece like any other American."

Here in Washington the CIO executive board, although again disapproving Wallace's candidacy, condemned the Iowan's treatment and called on public officials of the South to "put an end to these denials of civil liberty."

Walter White, secretary to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, discussed the Wallace pelting with President Truman and later hinted that Mr. Truman may have more to say on the subject at his press conference Thursday.

White himself blamed the inci-

Roar of Hecklers Again Marks Final North Carolina Talk

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 31.—Henry Wallace boarded a train here tonight headed for Tennessee, after another day of boos, eggs and frustration in North Carolina.

The most vehement demonstration came today in Hickory. Here, as elsewhere, Wallace escaped the garbage thrown at him. But a policeman standing at his side was hit smack in the face by an egg.

This egg, and the others, had been carefully selected for rottenness. Afterward a foul stench hung over the area.

As Wallace tried to talk, hecklers yelled such things as "nigger lover" and "did Stalin tell you to say that?"

Exasperated, Wallace finally cried out: As Jesus said to His disciples, if in any town they won't listen to you, then shake the dust from your feet and go elsewhere."

Asheville, a resort city in the mountains, was more hospitable; but even here there were some boos.

Schuman Approved As Premier

French Assembly Gives Him Weakest Sendoff of Any 4th Republic Minister

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Aug. 31 (NYHT).—The French National Assembly approved tonight by the narrow margin of 11 votes the appointment of former Premier Robert Schuman as head of a new government.

He succeeds Premier Andre Marie who was forced to resign last Saturday after only a month in office.

Schuman goes back to the post he held for eight months until he was forced out on July 19.

He returns under unhappy and inauspicious circumstances. He needed at least 311 votes, a majority of the deputies. He obtained only 322 to the 185 ballots that opposed him. This is the weakest sendoff received by any premier of the Fourth Republic.

In all cases the negative ballots were cast by Communists, but the difficulty is that the supporting coalition is growing weaker and weaker while the country's problems grow more complicated.

Seeks Economic Reform

Schuman now must pick his cabinet ministers and develop the program he hopes to carry out. He wants a government of center and left-of-center parties (as has existed in the past) and a policy of economic and financial reform (that has also been tried before).

In a short address to the Assembly this afternoon when he sought its support, he made clear that this program would follow closely the ideas laid down by the country's last two finance ministers — Rene Mayer and Paul Reynaud.

There is to be no general wage increase, Schuman said. Rather he would continue to fight inflation by a save-the-franc plan involving reduced government expenditures and higher taxes.

To satisfy organized labor, which is fighting for higher pay to meet increased living costs, he promised lower prices for meat and wine, some tax reductions and higher allowances for low-income families.

Schuman won his majority following a decision by the Socialist Party to give him a chance, although it was the Socialist Party which forced him out of office in July and then broke the Marie administration last week.

If the new premier fails to form a stable government, the center and left-of-center parties may have to admit an inability to govern with the present parliament. The result then would be dissolution of the Assembly and new national elections—for which Gen. Charles de Gaulle has been clamoring.

To prevent this, Schuman intends to cut government expenses as Reynaud would have cut them if the Marie administration had stayed in power. He said this afternoon he also would have to get 80 billion francs (about 270 million dollars) in new taxes before the end of the year—half by direct and half by indirect taxation.

Tito Tightens Front Against Cominform

Blasts at Balkan Nations Again in Elevating Cabinet Marxist 'Traitors'

Belgrade, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito drastically reorganized his cabinet today, elevating to top posts two ministers denounced along with himself by the Cominform.

At the same time, he redoubled his vitriolic attacks on his neighboring Balkan nations.

Tito consolidated his power by appointing Vice Premier Edvard Kardelj foreign minister and Gen. Alexander Rankovic vice premier. Kardelj also will remain as vice premier and Rankovic will retain his post as minister of interior, in charge of the secret police.

Attacked by Cominform

Tito, Kardelj and Rankovic were attacked by the Cominform as traitors to communism for straying from the Marxist line.

Stanoje Simitch, the only non-Communist in the government, was demoted from foreign minister to minister without portfolio.

The Yugoslav "republic" of Macedonia, with official permission, issued a blast at Bulgaria, charging Bulgarians were "chauvinists" who dreamed of creating a "greater Bulgaria." The territory of Macedonia, which extends into Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece, long has been a bone of contention among Balkan states.

Fourth Bitter Attack

The pronouncement was the fourth bitter attack from Yugoslavia on her former Cominform partners within the past week. Notes to Romania and Hungary declared those governments advocated the overthrow of Tito.

A sharp editorial in the Communist paper Borba this morning charged Albania with insulting and maltreating her Yugoslav minority and carrying out "a deliberate anti-Yugoslav campaign."

Greeks Report Yugoslavs Intern Vafiades Rebels

Athens, Aug. 31 (AP).—Newspapers said today Yugoslavia has started interning guerillas of Markos Vafiades as they flee before the Greek army drive.

If true, this would mean another Yugoslav defiance of Moscow as a result of the Cominform attacks on Yugoslav Communist leaders.

A highly placed neutral observer said Yugoslav help to the Greek Communist leader declined after the quarrel started between Tito and the Cominform. The observer said Vafiades visited Tito personally, after the Cominform break, to ask for help. Tito said no.

The unconfirmed newspaper report said guerillas crossing the border were put into a concentration camp in Yugoslavia. Some turned back to Greece, and the Yugoslavs increased border patrols and frontier posts.

Big 4 Military Chiefs Meet After 5 Months On Currency Issue

Parleys Shifted From Moscow in Negotiations to Break Blockade

Berlin, Aug. 31 (AP).—East-West negotiations to break the 69-day blockade of Berlin shifted from Moscow to this city tonight with a meeting of Germany's four military governors, their first in five months.

Coupled with their discussion on practical steps for lifting the siege of Berlin was the highly technical problem of finding a way out of the confusion created by two rival currencies in this city of 3¼ million people.

After conferring for only an hour in the huge gray stone Allied Control Council Building, the Russian, British, American and French military governors left without making a formal statement.

However, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American commander, said "We will meet again tomorrow."

Currency Problem Vital

It was understood top financial advisers to the military governors will get together in the meantime to discuss technical details of the money problem with the aim of getting agreement for a single currency here. In the Russian view, such an agreement is essential for working out any final East-West agreement on Berlin as a whole.

In Washington the State Department declared measures for lifting the blockade were among the points before the conference. However, General Clay said he could not answer questions along that line.

Asked by correspondents if today's conference went off amicably, an American official answered, "It depends on what you call amicable."

A crowd of at least 200 curious Germans stood outside the gates of the building where the Allied Control Council held its last meeting on March 20. The Russians walked out of that meeting, declaring the western powers were splitting Germany with their plans for a west German government.

French Diplomat Arrives

The four-power discussions which shifted here after more than a month of negotiations in Moscow, began after the arrival of Francois Seydoux, political and diplomatic adviser to Gen. Pierre Koenig, the French military governor. Seydoux has been acting as adviser to Yves Chataigneau, French ambassador in Moscow, during the negotiations.

It was understood that he brought directives from the three western power envoys in Moscow who were reported to have reached agreement on the principles of a currency agreement with the Russians.

The western envoys in Moscow were reported not sufficiently acquainted with the technical de-

Headed Cominform In Attack on Tito, Led Marshall Plan Fight

From Press Dispatches

London, Aug. 31.—Col. Gen. Andrei A. Zhdanov, one of the two or three likeliest successors to Prime Minister Stalin, died today "after a serious illness," an official Moscow broadcast said.

Zhdanov, 52, was in charge of the Communist International Information Bureau and a major force in the Cominform's sensational attack of two months ago on Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

It was Zhdanov, too, as leader of Russia's ideological war against the western world, who delivered the keynote speech last fall for the Soviet Union's fight against the Marshall Plan.

Along with Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov and Communist Party Secretary Georgi Malenkov, he has generally been considered a leading candidate to take over when Stalin dies. Stalin is 68.

Like Stalin, Zhdanov was a Georgian. As secretary of the Communist Party in Leningrad, he was believed to have counseled the attack on Finland in the winter war of 1939-40. The unsuccessful attack in its early stages brought a slump in his prestige, but he bounced back in World War II when he sparked the successful defense of Leningrad against Nazi siege.

There have been many rumors of a feud between Zhdanov and Molotov, springing perhaps from the natural rivalry of two men who

Peters, U. S. Reds' 'Big Boss,' Sought Revolt, Witnesses Say

Berle Names Hiss As Among Those Friendly to Soviet

By Bert Andrews

Adolf A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State and former Ambassador to Brazil, was on record yesterday as saying his diplomatic career ended after he "got trimmed" in a fight with men in the State Department who espoused "a pro-Russian point of view."

Berle named Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of State, and Alger Hiss, former State Department official, as two leaders of the other camp, but emphasized he was not impugning anybody's loyalty on the basis of a controversy in which he admitted he "had a biased view."

Berle, according to a transcript made public of testimony he gave in New York Monday night in a closed session of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, was asked specifically if he was "at any time suspicious" of Hiss, who has been named by Whittaker Chambers, former Communist and now an editor of Time magazine,

'Underground Head' Accused by Four At N. Y. Hearing

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Four one-time Communists today identified "J. Peters" as a key figure in operations of the party in the United States in the 30's.

They testified at a deportation hearing for the mysterious Peters, described by Whittaker Chambers to the House Un-American Activities Committee as the head man in the Communist underground in this country.

One deportation witness, Maurice Malkin, said Peters was "the big boss" in the Communist Party who organized action committees designed to take over the United States in time of war or economic crisis.

Another, George Hewitt, testified Peters preached that the United States "must be destroyed."

Revolutionary Worker

Andrew Smith, a third witness, said Peters was "the most active man working for the revolution in America."

The fourth, Charles H. White, charged that Peters represented the American Communist Party at the Comintern in Moscow.

Hewitt, former member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, said he renounced communism in 1944. Smith testified he left the party in 1935 after 16 years of membership.

Malkin said he was expelled from the party in 1928 for Trotskyite views, but then spent six years as a member in the 30's.

White said he left the party in 1935.

Peters, 54, a native of Czechoslovakia, was charged at the Immigration and Naturalization Service hearing with advocating the violent overthrow of the United States, and with having entered the country without a valid visa.

He has refused, on the advice of his attorney, to take any part in the hearing, contending it is illegal.

However, he told newsmen at a recess that the witnesses were "all confused" and added he wanted to remain in this country.

Law Delays Food Prices Drop to 1950

One Word's Shift Would Have Begun Cut Next January

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

If one word in the new Farm Act had been put in another section of the law, housewives could look forward to a drop in many food prices next January.

As it is, they will have to wait until January 1, 1950—one year—for those benefits, unless the new Congress amends the law when it meets next January.

The present price support law provides that the Secretary of Agriculture, through the Commodity Credit Corporation, must support prices of many farm products at 90 per cent of parity through "loans or purchases."

This provision is extended until December 31, 1949, in the new Farm Act. But under Title II of the new act—which doesn't go into effect until January 1, 1950—it is provided that the Secretary of Agriculture support farm prices "through loans, purchases, payments, and other operations."

It is that one word "payments" that makes the difference.

At present Agriculture Secretary Brannan has no alternative if prices of certain products go below 90 per cent of parity, but to support the market price by buying at that level. Or he may lend that amount on the products if they are properly stored.

Under the payment provision he will be permitted to let prices on the open market find their own level, and pay the difference to the producer between that market price and the parity support level.

If that provision were in effect now, potatoes, for instance, might be selling at far below present prices, with the Government making up the difference in direct payments to the grower. This would be similar to the producer subsidies paid under price controls during the war.

The same thing would apply to several other items, such as eggs, dried fruits, poultry, etc., and probably would be applicable soon to cotton, grains and other products, large harvests of which are imminent.

The new farm law was passed in the closing minutes of the ses-

Chemists Told Of Blood Test For Cancer

Originator Cautious On Claims; New Drugs For Old Ails Described

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A new blood test for cancer, another in the long-futile search for a quick check, was reported here yesterday.

If it proves successful after further refinement it may revolutionize present means for finding cancer in its early, curable stages.

The test and its admittedly inconclusive findings were disclosed by its originator, Dr. Robert Willheim, refugee German biochemist, before a biological chemistry session of the 114th meeting of the American Chemical Society, at Hotel Statler.

Assembled chemists and chemical engineers also were told of a pain-killing drug more potent than cocaine, a fungi-killing chemical that's death on athlete's foot and scalp ringworm, a new series of drugs giving temporary relief for high blood pressure, and a detailed report on the research use of the electron microscope.

Dr. Willheim, onetime professor of biochemistry at the Uni-

Huey Long's Son Lags in Senate Primary Returns

New Orleans, La., Aug. 31 (AP). Judge Robert F. Kennon tonight led Russell Long, son of the late Huey P. Long, by 11,370 votes for the United States Senate.

Unofficial returns were from 766 of 1883 precincts in today's Democratic primary. Nearly half were from New Orleans, which in unofficial complete returns gave Kennon a lead of 25,734.

The other returns came from 48 of the State's 64 parishes. Returns from some parishes considered favorable to Long were slow

The unofficial 766-precinct total gave Kennon 123,139, Long 111,769.

In the other Senatorial race, Senator Allen J. Ellender continued to pull ahead of two opponents. The unofficial total from 766 precincts gave Ellender 123,139, Representative James Domengeaux, 54,529 and Charles S. Gerth 20,242.

'Axis Sally' Granted Delay In Hearing on Treason Charge

Sobbing Defendant Assured She Will Not Be 'Railroaded'

Mildred Elizabeth Gillars, the alleged "Axis Sally" of the Nazi wartime radio, yesterday won a two-week continuance of a preliminary hearing on the treason charges against her, and also assurance that American justice will protect her against "railroading."

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, she asked for and received the delay so she could get hospital treatment.

The Government also asked for postponement to finish presenting witnesses to the Federal grand jury.

Highlighting other developments in the dramatic case, District Court Justice Richmond B. Keech formally severed from the case one of two attorneys who earlier had said they were Miss Gillars' representatives.

Justice Keech permitted Richard W. Tompkins, who said he was retained by John M. Holzworth as assistant counsel, to withdraw from the case as an attorney of record.

The defendant said yesterday that she had not engaged a lawyer.

Radar Rescues Bay Captain After Freighter Sinks

Solomons, Md., Sept. 1 (Wednesday).—A 33-year-old bay boat captain was rescued by radar early today, more than eight hours after his little freighter was swamped by high seas and sank about 50 miles below Annapolis.

The rescue was effected by the City of Norfolk, a Chesapeake Bay steamer making its regular run from Baltimore to Norfolk. While the steamer was off Cedar Point, about four miles south of the sinking scene, it picked up a strange object by radar.

A searchlight was turned on and it proved to be Richard Christy, skipper of the 55-foot bay freighter C. A. Christy. He was clinging to a remnent of his vessel's pilot house.

A boat was lowered and he was taken aboard. He was too exhausted to talk.

CIO Secretary Carey Declines Bid to House Labor Hearing

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, said yesterday he would not testify on communism in the United Electrical Workers before a congressional hearing opening Thursday.

He made public a letter to Representative Kersten (R., Wis.) saying that he had turned down such requests before, and "must respectfully decline your invitation" again.

The hearings to investigate communism in trade unions will be conducted by a House labor subcommittee headed by Kersten. The Wisconsin Congressman had asked Carey to testify.

Kersten in a letter August 23 invited Carey to appear before his group about "widely published newspaper reports to the effect that the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO) has failed to set its house in order concerning its ideological aspects."

Carey was the first president of the union, and is still a member

Rule Allowing Atheists Radio Time Called 'Thought Control'

A witness before a congressional investigation committee asserted yesterday that a recent decision of the Federal Communications Commission on the right of "atheists" to radio time "constitutes thought control."

The decision amounts to the Federal Government telling a broadcaster what he must put on the air, Don Petty, general counsel for the National Association of Broadcasters, testified before a special House committee investigating the FCC.

At the same hearing, the committee was told that there are "50,000,000 atheists in the United States" by Charles Smith of New York, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism.

Although Smith criticized the FCC for failure to rule "squarely" that atheists were entitled to equal time on the air with any "religious" group, he said the communication commissioners are better "theologians than some of the witnesses who appeared here today." He referred specifically to

Death of 3 Soldiers In Explosion Laid To Bazooka Shell

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Three Fifth Division soldiers were killed and 23 others injured today in a mysterious explosion on the Fort Jackson reservation.

An unofficial report from the post said that one of the marching trainees picked up a "dud" bazooka shell, lying in the road, and tossed it out of the way. The shell was said to have gone off with "a tremendous blast."

The Army began an investigation but withheld its findings. It said only that the company of trainees was marching to a machinegun demonstration when it was broken up by the explosion.

Prague, Aug. 31 (NYHT).—Former President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia was officially reported tonight to have "lost consciousness" and to be in an "extremely serious" condition after a considerable worsening of his health during the last 24 hours.

The bulletin said Benes' temperature began to rise this morning and his pulse quickened, developing a "slight irregularity" during the afternoon. "The breathing indicates circulation trouble . . . the blood pressure is gradually lowering," it added.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

James B. Carey, CIO Secretary, Known As Spunky Opponent of Communists

James Barron Carey, who became secretary of the CIO at an age wheen many men nowadays are just getting their start in life, once felt he might have been mistaken for a Communist hero.

JAMES B. CAREY
He disapproves

The scrappy- spunky 37-year-old champion of trade unionism feels his record, of course, will refute any such contention.

It was back in September, 1941, when he was the center of a stormy battle over American foreign policy and aid to Russia during the national convention of the United Electrical Radio Machine Workers of the CIO, that he found himself in an ironic position.

He failed to be re-eleected as president at that convention after his effort to push through the resolutions committee a resolution specifically condemning communism was repuidated by a majority of the delegates.

At the same time, a resolution condemning American aid to her Allies-to-be had passed the executive board by a vote of 10-2.

The executive board had met on June 21 and 22 of the same year, the very day Hitler and Stalin came to blows on something more than a diplomatic level.

The board had not met on June 13, as it normally would have, because it was Friday—ang another member thought it might be "tempting fate." At Carey's direction, the meeting was postponed a week.

"You did that merely to embarrass your associates," one delegate at the convention later told him, and Carey says he was believed to have had a "direct pipeline to Hitler."

"In view of my internationalistic views," Carey said, "the Communists should have hailed me as a hero, because I was fighting for increased production and lend-lease to help nations fighting Hitler.

"But in view of my generally anti-Communist policies, they sought my defeat."

He said Communists in this country didn't want to give foreign aid because "they misunderstood the nature of the war." They didn't want to help Hitler's enemies, because they felt they "had a deal with Hitler."

"The minute the Nazi army moved in the other direction from France, it became a people's war in their eyes."

It was only one of innumerable instances that point up James Carey's proclivity for getting into a good hot controversy.

He has continued to fight for a constitutional change giving local unions autonomy to ban Communists as officers, and even those on the other side have praised his leadership. Under him, the UERMWA gained more than 350,000 members, doubled its dues collections and established itself as one of the five largest unions in the CIO.

The slightly built, quiet and immensely active labor leader was born in Philadelphia in 1911. It was there that he got his first job, in the radio laboratory of the Philco Radio Corp.

He studied electrical engineering nights at Drexel Institute and became active in the Phil-Rod Fishing Club, a social organization with seven members at first.

Young Carey continued his schooling at the University of Pennsylvania and gave much of his time to the growing "fishing" club of sports lovers.

It developed that the Phil-Rod outfit was the germ of his abiding love for the working man and his lot. It became one of the first trade unions among electrical workers, and he was its king pin.

His shock of curly hair was tousled in many a debate after that, for he found himself one of the youngest leaders in a flourishing movement. He became at 27 the national secretary of the CIO, a "club" which was organized even after the anglers at Philco found their gatherings of interest.

CIO Secretary Carey Declines Bid to House Labor Hearing

as well as being secretary-treasurer of the CIO as a whole.

Carey wrote Kersten that he does not believe "such inquiries" are "within the competence of Congress." He said the U. E. is a "non-governmental organization" and that its internal questions "lie only within the competence of the members of that organization."

He rapped congressional probes of the nature Kersten is conducting by saying that "investigations and inquiries of this sort reveal a tendency of Congress, through misapplication of its authority, to brand labor organizations as conspiratorial groups."

He said such probes of communism in the past "always had the result of giving aid and comfort to the Communists."

[Carey last night told The Washington Post that he had been served with a subpena yesterday afternoon to appear at congressional hearings and that he would appear—Editor's note.]

Politically, the head of the United Electrical Workers, Albert J. Fitzgerald, has indorseed Henry A. Wallace for President, but said there would be no split in the CIO on indorsing President Truman, which the CIO executive board yesterday decided to do.

In New York, Fitzgerald, who Kersten said would be called as a witness, termed the hearings political and an attempt to steal "headlines" from the House Un-American Activities Committee.

He said the hearings were an attempt to "blackmail" delegates to U.E.'s national convention starting this week and "a part of a reactionary pattern to impress 'thought control' upon the working people of this country."

"In implying that the leaders and members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America have been or are likely to be guilty of spying, treason and espionage, Representative Kersten of Wisconsin reveals himself as a completely unprincipled publicity seeker, liar and slanderer," Fitzgerald's statement said.

The statement added:

"The members of the U. E., in common with all American citizens, are accountable to no one for their political ideas.

"Certainly, they are not accountable to Charles J. Kersten despite his efforts to set himself up as an ideological gauleiter over the politics of working men and women and over the policies of their unions.

"The house of the U. E. is in better order than the House of Representatives under the Eightieth Congress. Our house is in good order because we fight for a better life for our members, as our 1500 union contracts prove, while the Eightieth Congress has brazenly flouted every interest of the common people of our country."

Naming Kersten and Representative Carroll C. Kearns (R., Pa.) to investigate U. E. is a "farce," Fitzgerald said, since "both hate this union because U. E. members have opposed their election in the past and will do so in the future."

Hiss 'Sympathized' With Reds, Berle Explains to Committee

as a member of a Communist cell in Washington during the mid-1930's.

"I Was Worried"

"A better way of saying it," Berle replied, "is: I was worried. I ought to begin by confessing a prejudice here so that you can discount whatever I say here."

Asked a similar question later by committee members intent at the moment on checking the merits of the stories told by Chambers and Hiss, who is president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Berle said:

"Frankly, I still don't know whether this is a boy (he was refering to Hiss) that got in deep and then pulled clear, or what goes on here."

Berle's published testimony topped these other developments:

1. The House Committee said it would check Chambers' testimony that his immediate superior, during a brief period on the Federal payroll, was a Communist. Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) said the man in question would be subpenaed if the report proved true.

Statement Doubted

2. The House committee said it doubted Chambers' statement that he was paid at the rate of about $6000 a year for that job in 1937. His pay rate will be checked. The committee noted that Chambers gave that as the rate after saying several times he did not remember what the salary was.

3. Efforts to reach Hiss and his attorney, John F. Davis of Washington or Acheson for comment were unsuccessful.

Berle, in the closed session, was questioned about Chambers' story that Chambers, in tht company of Isaac Don Levine, told Berle that Hiss was a member of a Communist cell.

Berle also recalled that Levine phoned in August, 1939, and said that Marvin McIntire, a secretary of President Roosevelt, had said it might be "useful to talk to Berle.

Berle remembered having Chambers come to his home but did not recall that Levine was with him.

Chambers In Hiding

"He said he had lived in hiding for a year or more under various names," Berle said. "He appeared to be even then in fear of some sort of reprisal and was obviously under some emotional strain.

"He said that in addition to the New York corps, the Communist party policy had been to try to develop a group of sympathizers who might be of use to them later in the United States Government. This was not, as he put it, any question of espionage. There was no espionage involved in it. He stated that their hope merely was to get some people who would be sympathetic to their point of view."

Berle said Chambers "finally came down" to mentioning four men, Alger Hiss, his brother, Donald Hiss; Nathan Witt, and Lee Pressman, as well as some others whose names Berle did not recall.

"He said it was hoped that these men would go underground; that is, they would not appear as part of the well-known or open Communist group, but would simply be there and be sympathetic.

"He did not make the direct statement that any of these men were members of the Communist Party. They were, apparently, from what I then gathered, men who were sympathetic to their general point of view and to whom they might have access and perhaps a sympathetic approach in case anybody brought a request."

What Berle Did

Berle said he asked Chambers if he had given the information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and whether Chambers would be willing "to bear witness."

Robert Stripling, chief investigator for the House committee: "Did you subsequently do anything officially or unofficially about this information?"

Berle: "Yes, I did a great deal. I was disturbed a good deal, but not so much at the three or four men named. Mr. Pressman was out of the Government. To be blunt about it, Mr. Witt's statements and sympathies were so well known that what Mr. Chambers had said added nothing to anything that wasn't public knowledge at the time. I looked then into the position of the two Hiss boys."

Berle said the Hiss brothers had relatively unimportant jobs, and "further, the idea that the two Hiss boys and Nat Witt were going to take over the United States didn't strike me as an immediate danger." He added:

"What was interesting was that the Communist Party was really trying an undercover lobbying operation, plus the attempt to reach various people who might be useful to them later. That worried me and two or three people I talked to."

Berle said he talked to Acheson, then Assistant Secretary of State, and Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter, of the United States Supreme Court. He said both gave Hiss blanket indorsements.

Called in FBI

"This seemed to negative any immediate danger," Berle said. "Schematically, however, I believe that Chambers was telling the truth as he saw it, so I caused the department to establish very close relations with the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Berle said the results were:

1. Establishment of closer liaison with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

2. Writing of the Foreign Agents Registration Act, which was subsequently passed by Congress.

3. Establishment of a group in the State Department's European division "to study the foreign intelligence in the hope of establishing any link between the Communist group here and the Russian government."

Berle said on Point No. 3: "It was our theory—and still is my theory—that, however well concealed, the Communist Party (in the United States) is not interested in forwarding the Russian interests here. Later on, they may have some idea of world revolution."

Berle said he thought the added precautions "kept things pretty clear," although some people who were hastily recruited turned up in the Board of Economic Warfare and the Office of Strategic Services and were later taken over by the State Department. Of their records, he said, "we were not so sure."

Stripling: "Did Mr. Hiss ever do anything, whether it was on a policy level or on a minor level, that would arouse any suspicion on your part that he might be either sympathetic to the Communist Party or serving the interests of the Soviet Union?"

Here Berle replied that a better way to put it was that he "was worried," and continued:

"In the fall of 1944 there was a difference of opinion in the State Department. I felt that the Russians were not going to be sympathetic and cooperative. Victory was then assured, though not complete, and the intelligence reports which were in my charge indicated a very aggressive policy not at all in line with the kind of cooperation everyone was hoping for.

"I was pressing for a pretty cleancut showdown then when our position was strongest.

"The opposite group in the State Department was Mr. Acheson's group, of course, with Mr. Hiss as his principal assistant in the matter. Whether that was a difference on foreign policy—and the question could be argued both wyas—was a problem, but at that time Mr. Hiss did take what we would call today the pro-Russian point of view.

Reason for Concern

"Now, that was reason for worry.

"It was not necessarily a reason to draw the conclusion that he was a disloyal man. Many people who were quite loyal, including a good many of the army officers, felt the Russian army would be of importance in case of an invasion of Japan, and that by consequence it was desirable not to raise any issues until later.

"I say that in Mr. Hiss' defense, although I got trimmed in that fight, and as a result went to Brazil, and that ended my diplomatic career. I mention that, because I did have a biased view."

Berle said another thing that worried him was the consistent leaks whenever anything "went through that office." He said the department would usually learn about them through Drew Pearson's column "and one of his leg men was pretty intimate in that office."

Berle added:

"Well, that was reason for caution. It wasn't reason necessarily for indicting the man. I ought to state that, for whatever it is worth."

Showdown Looms

AFGE Rift Threatened in Office Battle

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Aug. 31.—The bitter behind-the-scenes fight over the presidency of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes appeared late today to be headed for a showdown on the convention floor.

Both of the leading candidates, James Burns and James Yaden of Washington, rejected overtures to withdraw in the interest of union harmony. Burns refused flatly to withdraw. Yaden said he would pull out if Burns would follow suit and if an acceptable candidate could be found.

The third-candidate instigators were backing Joseph Dunn, a Treasury Department employe from Kentucky, to head the union, which claims more than 30,000 members. However, late tonight both Yaden and Burns were claiming victory.

Blocs Threaten to Leave

Whoever wins, his victory is likely to leave wounds that won't be easily healed. Several big blocs of employes have threatened to pull out of the AFGE and join another Federal worker union unless their man wins control.

At its convention banquet, Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) pledged his support to measures to benefit the Federal worker. He told how his father had spent nearly 40 years in the postal service and was retired on a modest pension. The Senator also revealed that he was a former postal employe.

"You have my support and you will always have it," he told the 400 delegates, "and perhaps what I have said might explain to you why I have from time to time raised the roof down in Washington with supposeedly intelligent persons who sometimes appear before our committee and make bland and casual know-it-all remarks about the lazy Federal payrollers, the bureaucrats, the loafers, gobbling the tax dollars out of the trough of Uncle Sam's payroll and giving nothing for their pay but just sitting around throwing away the taxpayers' dollars and enjoying life at the taxpayers' expense.'

"I am very proud of the Government service, just as you are all, I am sure, proud of it, too. It strikes me that by and large the devotion of the career worker is something to be praised rather than condemned. I just do not like the blanket accusations and condemnations of the Federal employe because they are not justified; they are libelous and slanderous and unfair and dirty misrepresentations."

2 Seated Over Opposition

Earlier in the day the convention voted to seat Ira Bain and McKinley Kreigh as delegates from the Washington Internal Revenue Lodge. Their seating was opposed strenuously by Richard Vingoe, the lodge president, and other delegates on the ground that intimidation was used to get the members to vote for Bain and Kreigh. However, the credentials committee and the convention dismissed the complaint.

The convention had before it for action today a host of resolutions that would affect Federal workers. Among them were:

A system of unemployment insurance for Government people; that the expense allowance for official travel be raised from $6 to $10 a day; that present benefits be doubled for injured employes; that a pay raise that would fully offset the cost of living be enacted by Congress, and that the national dues of AFGE members be raised from 30 to 40 cents a month.

Army May Draft, Then Oust Reds

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Army officials said yesterday that Communists called up under the draft probably will be inducted but then ousted when their membership is definitely established.

Sometime ago it was disclosed that screening tests would be given to all draftees. At that time, however, there was a difference of opinion about what to do with Communists or men found to belong to other subversive organizations.

One group of officials wanted to get rid of all potentially disloyal soldiers. Others felt it was better to accept them and put them in special units rather than create such a way of evading the draft.

Board Studies Question

Now the Army has decided it wants to get rid of any Commies taken in via selective service. Such a recommendation, it was said last night, has been submitted to Defense Secretary James Forrestal. The question is now before a joint board headed by John Noble, jr., an assistant to the Defense chief.

Meanwhile, the National Guard Bureau said the Guard "will not knowingly include Communists in its rolls." A spokesman said that it was not believed that there are "any bona-fide members of the Communist Party in the Guard now" and that State and divisional units have intelligence and legal sections to check on enlistees.

While no one has been discharged directly because of Communist affiliation, "membership in the Communist Party makes a man unsuitable for membership in the National Guard," it was said.

Registration Continues

At 20,000 Selective Service centers throughout the country, the registration of some 9½ million men aged 18 through 25 continued yesterday. There were fewer reports of the friction which developed in several parts of the Nation Monday on the first registration day.

The older men—those 24 and 25—are being registered first, and they will be the first inducted to meet the Army's initial call of 10,000 men in November. Registration will be completed September 18.

National Selective Service Headquarters said that the first classification forms will be sent out next week. They'll go to the older nonveterans without dependents. The forms must be filled out and returned to draft boards within 10 days after receipt. Draft classifications will be made on the basis of these returns.

3 Democrats Urge Farm Price Support

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Three Democratic candidates for Senator from Central States today advocated variable farm price supports, and long-range attacks on inflation instead of a return to specific, OPA-type consumer price ceilings.

They said their views enlarge upon but do not conflict with the Democratic national platform or President Truman's stand on inflation.

By resolution 13 of the party's Governor and Senator candidates from eight States urged Midwestern voters to reject Republican "reaction and isolationism." Their resolution said election of the Democrats would help restore "the great tradition of liberalism native to the midlands region."

The declaration ended a two-day midlands conference to discuss Democratic campaign strategy in the area. It said the Democratic candidates alone will "fight for the farmer, the laborer, the small businessman, and for peace."

Support of TEW Bill Urged

The Senate candidates called for Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill principles to provide housing for low-income groups, for rolling back high prices as far as "practicable," and for variable farm price supports.

The farm price support system suggested is one "by which farm prices would fall by approximately one half the ratio by which output increases." They said this method would give both farmers and consumers a fair break.

To combat inflation, they suggested "effective credit control and retirement of a portion of the bank-held public debt" in good times.

The Senate candidates signing the resolution are Paul H. Douglas, Illinois; Hubert Humphrey, Minnesota; Frank Hook, Michigan; Guy M. Gillette, Iowa, and John A. Engel, South Dakota.

In another statement they indorsed the European Recovery Program and advised against "appeasement" of Soviet Russia. Douglas Hook and Engel later gave newsmen this elaboration on their anti-inflation suggestion:

Basis of Price Control

"We prefer controls of the general price level, instead of individual and specific price controls, except in monopoly-produced things like nickel, steel, glass bottles, sulphur and bananas.

"To require price control in a competitive society over a wide range of commodities requires a very high degree of industry cooperation and policing, which in peacetime is very difficult to obtain, particularly three years after a war."

Also attending the conference were Democratic Governor candidates from Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Their joint statement said the GOP leaders in their States "throw their weight behind reaction and isolationism" and "ignore the twin danger of a depression and war."

Gov. Lane Wires Wallace Of His 'Violent Opposition'

The Governor of Maryland didn't give a soft answer yesterday to Henry A. Wallace.

William Preston Lane, jr., told the Progressive Party's presidential candidate he is "in violent opposition" to Wallace's campaign.

The views were expressed in a telegraphic interchange begun by Wallace on August 27 when he wired asking Lane to do something about what he termed discriminatory practices of Baltimore hotels in refusing Progressive Party requests for dining facilities for a party function September 12.

"In view of your own party's professed interest in nonsegregated political functions, I request that you use full weight of your office to urge Baltimore hotels to end un-American practices of discrimination," wired Wallace.

Wired Lane:

"I am advised Baltimore hotels have scheduled numerous dinners attended by all races. If any objection exists I suspect it is not based on racial considerations but rather on personal objection to yourself. You can hardly expect me to assist your campaign to which I am in violent opposition."

Baltimore hotels said they turned down the Progressive Party's request because of previous bookings.

More Eggs, Tomatoes, Boos Greet Wallace

been splashed by eggs and tomatoes, were humming a parody on an old tin pan alley favorite as the Wallace caravan rolled through the Piedmont section:

"Nothing could be finer than to be out of Carolina in the morning."

Wallace, presidential candidate of the Progressive Party ran into his first shower of eggs and tomatoes of the day in North Carolina's largest city, Charlotte.

Marksmen Miss Target

His foes, however, were not the marksmen that he had encountered yesterday. Not a single missile reached him. One egg hit a girl standing about 3 feet from him, giving a yellow tinge to her pretty red hair. Another hit a fellow who was bawling "go back to Russia."

Wallace delivered his speech (or tried to) in front of the Mecklenburg County Courthouse. He stood before a monument commemorating "The Mecklenburg Declaration," a manifesto of independence issued by North Carolina patriots a year before the outbreak of the Revolutionary War.

As Wallace faced a portable microphone on the sidewalk, placard bearers crowded to the forefront of a crowd of 3000. One sign read "Aw, bubblehead, drop dead." Another read "Peddle your junk in Moscow, Henry."

Roar of Boos

Peter Seegar, Wallace's troubadour, had tried to get the crowd to join in singing the "Star-Spangled Banner," but it sullenly refused.

Wallace, starting out, said he was glad to be in one of the sacred and hallowed spots of America. He recalled that the rebels who drew up the Mecklenburg declaration were hardy Scotch-Irishmen and Englishmen.

Hecklers by this time were setting up a roar of boos and the eggs and tomatoes were beginning to fly.

"I come from the same brood of man," said Wallace, referring to the Mecklenburg rebels, and I tell you I won't be intimidated. My name is Wallace."

He referred to two of his ancestors who had been clergymen.

"I come here in the sacred tradition of American liberty and in the sacred tradition of Christianity," he shouted.

It is doubtful if anybody heard the words except those who stood within a few feet of him.

"Now I want Mary Price," Wallace continued. "Where's Mary?"

Miss Price, once known as "Puddin'," was mentioned by Elizabeth T. Bentley as a contact for a wartime Communist spy ring in the hearings in Washington. She now heads the Wallace forces in North Carolina.

"Well," continued Wallace, "I noticed this morning that Mary was wearing an American eagle. That eagle has two wings, a left wing and a right wing. If that eagle's going to fly, its got to have two wings. That's what the Progressive Party believes in."

Wallace Breaks Off Talk

The booing reached a crescendo at this point, and Wallace had to stop.

"If you don't want to listen to me in the tradition of the Mecklenburg Declaration . . ." he said, and then stopped altogether.

He smiled, waved to the crowd, and then headed for his automobile, amid cries of the familiar, "Go back to Russia."

Mary Price was roughed up by a man in the crowd, who snatched the silver American eagle from her breast. She replaced it with a Wallace-for-President campaign button.

On the way out of Winston-Salem this morning, Wallace ran into his first taste of inhospitality in the town of Salisbury. A sign tacked on a tree said, "Go to hell, Henry." Somebody threw an orange and it hit the side of Wallace's car. A cry of "Nigger lover" was heard as the caravan went through.

Here in Asheville, Wallace made a speech in front of the Buncombe County Courthouse. It was the only one of his North Carolina speeches that could be heard. There were some hecklers, but they were so few in number that Wallace was gratified.

"I am happy," he said, "to make my concluding talk before such an attentive audience."

There was some applause, but also the inevitable "boo."

Paper Criticizes Reception

The Raleigh News and Observer, edited by Jonathan Daniels, this morning contrasted the treatment accorded Henry Wallace in Virginia and in North Carolina.

North Carolina, the editorial said, "must bow today to the better manners, better sense and greater devotion to the faith in freedom on Sunday by Virginia.

"North and South, Henry Wallace leads a disintegrating cause which may have begun in idealism but now has been made the stooge if not the spearhead of those who talk much of democracy as the cloak for their disloyalty. What he said is no longer very important. What is important is that true Americans dedicate themselves anew to the preservation of liberties which too many men around Wallace would destroy.

"These liberties include, if they include anything, the right of even the most unpopular Americans to speak the most unpopular views.

"It should never be forgotten that the eggs in Durham were thrown not upon an insignificant and contemptible crew but upon the right of free speech in a free land."

Hecklers Seen Inspired By Progressives

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 31 (AP).—Police Chief John M. Gold said today much of the jeering and barrage of eggs and tomatoes that has followed Henry A. Wallace across North Carolina has been inspired by the Progressives.

Gold added he thought the hecklers were directing their efforts at their own presidential nominee to gain sympathy for Wallace.

"Most of the hecklers here were mere boys and young men," Chief Gold said. "Some were from out of town. Some have been identified by men as known members of the Communist Party. A leader of the Progressives in Winston-Salem was pointed out to my men as one of those who got the heckling off to a good start" when Wallace spoke here last night."

Progressives Ruled Off Illinois Election Ballot

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 31 (AP).—Progressive Party candidates were ruled off the November 2 Illinois election ballot by the State electoral board today.

The three-member board in a unanimous decision held that nominating petitions for the Wallace-Taylor national and State tickets failed to comply with State election law requirements.

Democratic objectors had challenged legality of the petitions.

Progressive leaders contended the opposition was based on fear that the new party's candidates would cut into Democratic vote total next November.

Gadsden's Mayor Doesn't Want Wallace There

Gadsden, Ala., Aug. 31 (AP).—Gadsden's Mayor J. Herbert Meighan wired Henry Wallace today "your presence is not desired here."

The Progressive Party candidate for President is scheduled to speak from the courthouse steps at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Meighan's telegram:

"You advocate peace but your appearance in the South is creating a breach of the peace."

Chief Nay Boman said he would have separate areas roped off for white and Negro spectators. The city ordinance here prohibits "mixed assemblies." Wallace has announced he would not address segregated audiences.

In Little Rock, the former Vice President has been denied use of the municipal auditorium. Today, Secretary of State C. G. Hall said he also would be prohibited from speaking from the State capitol steps. He said an Arkansas law prohibits use of the capitol grounds for political rallies.

Car-Sitting Lucrative In Inspection Lineup

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 31 (AP).—North Carolina's automobile inspection law has produced a new occupation here—car sitting.

Some motorists in the long lines of cars trying to beat today's deadline on certain models hired car sitters to do their hours of waiting for them.

The current rate: 50 cents an hour.

Stevenson Apparently Winner

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Coke R. Stevenson, former Texas Governor appeared tonight to have shaded Representative Lyndon B. Johnson in the race for the Democratic United States senatorial nomination. It was the closest political contest in Texas history.

The Texas election bureau estimated that only about 100 votes were uncounted when it reported stevenson with a 296-vote lead in a 3:30 p. m. (CST) (5:30 EDT) tabulation. The unofficial count stood then at 494,468 votes for Stevenson, 494,172 for Johnson.

Neither candidate had conceded and it was certain neither would until the last vote was formally certified. Even then, there was the possibility of court action in some counties to secure recounts.

Formal certification of the winner on the basis of official returns from all of the 254 counties must await the meeting of the Democratic State executive committee in Fort Worth two weeks hence.

Several errors were corrected and revisions made in the election bureau's unofficial reports during the day. They mainly benefited Stevenson.

This caused Johnson to issue a sharply-worded statement from Austin.

"It is not meant to question the Texas election bureau," he said, "but the fact remains that my gains have been in votes counted and my gains have been steadily offset by 'correction' . . .

"If I lose this election, I want to lose it by the votes of the people and not by mistakes and corrections."

He asked all county chairman to let a Johnson representative sit in when the formal canvass was made.

He recalled that he lost the Senatorial office in 1941 by 1311 votes and charged that he was "counted out" on the Wednesday after voting day.

Crowds in St. Louis See VFW on March

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The Veterans of Foreign Wars, attending their forty-ninth annual encampment, paraded 20,000 strong through downtown St. Louis today.

Police estimated the crowds that lined the streets at 200,000.

Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann and Eugene Van Antwerp of Detroit headed the parade, followed by units of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

At the business session of the encampment preceding the parade, Carl R. Gray, jr., veterans administrator, told delegates that veterans' gains during the postwar period should now be "solidified and made permanent."

Gray said housing remains the most urgent problem for veterans. Employment readjustment is not complete, he said, with more than 2,500,000 veterans still in school or taking on-the-job training.

The delegates, over the opposition of their national security committee, approved by voice vote a resolution recommending that draft boards be made up entirely of veterans.

The delegates voted for adoption of universal military training and selective service. Other resolutions called for a National Guard for Alaska, for President Truman to present the Berlin situation before the U. N., and for presidential candidates to issue statements on the solidarity of American foreign police.

Girl Tells Why She Started Fires

WONET McNEIL, 13, of Macomb, Ill., who admitted starting a chain of some 200 fires on the farm of her uncle, said she did so because she wanted to be sent to live with her divorced mother, Mrs. Leona Eagle of Bloomington, Ill. A psychiatrist at the Illinois Research Hospital in Chicago said, after spending an hour with the child, that she was not abnormal mentally and added, "She was a victim of a family mixup and divorce as some kids are. It was a nice little kid caught in the middle"

Oil Industry Predicts Thin Winter Margin

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Even if the weather is normal during the winter, demand for crude oil will be 7 per cent greater than it was last winter, a committee of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission estimated today.

The oil industry can keep up with this demand, the Economics Advisory Committee said. But to do so it will have to:

1. Maintain domestic production of 5,600,000 barrels of crude oil and 415,000 barrels of natural gas liquids daily.
2. Import about 200,000 more barrels a day than it exports, and
3. Withdraw from accumulated stocks 180,000 barrels daily.

This estimate assumes that military demands will remain relatively unchanged, and that the present rate of installing new oil and kerosene burners is not materially exceeded, the committee said. It added:

"Although the supply situation is now easier than it has been for many months, there exists such a slight margin of capacity above requirements that the industry should continue its efforts to increase supplies and consumers should strive for economy and efficient use of petroleum products."

Conference Backs Navy Tanker Steel

The Navy yesterday backed a proposal that 40,000 tons of steel a month be set aside for the construction of 81 oil tankers.

The Navy's support was given at a hearing by the Commerce Department's Office of Industry Cooperation (OIC). The OIC has developed a steel channeling program for tankers that has been approved by steel industry representatives.

AFL and CIO labor representatives, the Shipbuilders Council of American, the oil industry, the armed services Petroleum Board and the Interior Department joined the Navy in indorsing the program.

Sixty-three of the 81 new high speed, T-2 tankers already are under construction or on "firm order" to be built at Bethlehem Steel, the Sun Shipbuilding, Newport News, Ingalls and National Bulk Carriers Shipbuilding yards

The other 18 are to be built by the New York Shipbuilding and Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding yards.

No opposition to the gurantee of steel for tankers was expressed at the hearing.

2500 DPs To Enter U. S. In October

About 2500 displaced persons from Europe will be brought to the United States in October, Ugo Carusi, chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission, announced yesterday.

These will be the first of the 205,000 who can be admitted in the next two years under the new act of Congress, which President Truman labeled "discriminatory" when he signed it. Carusi said the influx of refugees would increase to 10,000 a month when the new machinery provided in the law gets under way.

He plans to leave for Europe Monday to get the new overseas organization set up.

In the face of criticism from abroad that the movement of displaced persons had been "stalled," the State Department issued a statement yesterday saying that "the executive branch of the Government is doing everything that can be done to get the program going as soon as possible."

It cited the Act of Congress itself as the reason why no visas have been issued to DPs since June 30.

Navy Salutes Oldendorf On Retirement

The Navy high command yesterday saluted Vice Adm. Jesse B. Oldendorf, the hard-bitten veteran who "crossed the T" to win the battle of Surigao Strait.

Oldendorf

The 61-year-old admiral, who is going on the Navy's retired list at his own request, received letters from Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan and Adm. Louis E. Denfield, chief of naval operations, commending his long and distinguished service.

While heading a Philippine task force protecting Army troops storming ashore at the Leyte Gulf, he executed the Navy's traditional coup in the early morning hours of October 25, 1944.

The task force sank two Japanese battleships and three destroyers. One United States destroyer was severely damaged by gunfire.

Sullivan, complimenting Oldendorf on a "distinguished career," said "your professional skill and your magnificent achievements in your execution of the many vital missions of World War II, reflect the highest credit on the naval service."

Denfeld said the "crushing defeat" of the enemy at Surigao strait "assured the success of the American forces in the Philippines."

CIO Board Indorses Truman

lace movement, argued for five hours for a hands-off policy.

At a press conference following the meeting, CIO President Philip Murray estimated unions represented by these leaders had about one million of the CIO's total 6,150,000 membership.

Murray said the majority vote to support Truman should provide "intelligent guidance" to CIO members but is in no way binding on the membership.

Decision Not Mandatory

There is no way under the CIO constitution to make a decision of this sort mandatory," he added. He said he recommended the board's action and reporters could "assume" he would speak for Truman during the campaign. Ex officio members of the board, neither Murray nor Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey voted on the showdown.

The 12 leaders, representing 11 CIO unions, who voted against the resolution were:

Albert J. Fitzgerald and Julius Emspack of the United Electrical Workers; Joseph Selly, American Communications Association; Grant Oakes, Farm Equipment Workers; J. F. Juriche, Fishermen and Allied Workers; Donald Henderson, Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers; Ben Gold, Fur and Leather Workers; Morris Pizer, United Furniture Workers; Irving Dvorin, Marine Cooks and Stewards; Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; James Durkin, United Office and Professional Workers, and Abram Flaxer, United Public Workers.

Fitzgerald, who served as permanent chairman of the Wallace convention, said none of the 12 dissenters would "take a walk" from CIO because of the vote.

Henderson Accuses Truman

Donald Henderson, who also voted "No," issued a statement calling for "complete political freedom of CIO unions, units and members to make their own election choices." Henderson charged Truman "has led the way in the anti-labor pattern developed since the death of Roosevelt", and said "significant segments of labor" will not support him.

The majority resolution, however, praised Truman for his veto of the Taft-Hartley Act, said he "braved the wrath of the bigots in his own party to prove his devotion to the cause of civil rights. It commended his fight in Congress for price control, housing, Social Security extension and other unenacted measures.

It charged Congress was controlled by "a coalition of do-nothing Republicans and bigoted Dixiecrats."

The same resolution condemned Dewey for siding with GOP congressional leaders and said he is committed "to his own party's special interest platform."

As for Wallace's third party, the CIO majority said it "offers nothing but division and defeat to really progressive Americans."

The board said other candidates for office will be measured by their record for support for, or opposition to, the program recommended by the CIO.

Thurmond Predicts Victory in Texas

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 31 (AP).—A States' Rights Democratic victory in Texas was predicted today by presidential candidate J. Strom Thurmond.

A three-county Texas referendum in which Democrats gave the States' Rights ticket a majority over President Truman and United States Senator Alben Barkley shows that "ours is a grass roots movement," he said.

The referendum was "a good index to the thinking of the people," he declared.

The ticket headed by Thurmond and vice presidential candidate Fielding Wright of Mississippi was preferred in Harris, Brazoria and Harrison Counties. Harris, which contains Houston, has Texas' largest voting population.

Garment Workers Indorse Democrats

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Truman-Barkley Democratic presidential ticket was indorsed by the general executive board of the AFL International Ladies Garment Workers Union today.

David Dubinsky, ILGWU president, who announced the endorsement, said it was based on "the liberal platform of the Democratic Party."

Peters Called Big Red Boss

where he has been 25 years.

Peters asserted "I never heard of those action committees" about which Malin testified.

The defendant said he was unemployed, but denied he was a paid Communist Party official.

He said he had worked in factories, but had found it hard to get a job since he was arrested on the deportation warrant last October.

Peters reiterated in the interview that his real name is Alexander Stevens. The Government lists him under the name of Peters.

Three of the four witnesses told of seeing Peters at Moscow in 1930, 1931 and 1932 when they were students at the Lenin School.

Malkin said he was expelled from the party at a "trial' at which Peters was judge and prosecutor.

Malkin testified that the "Red Front action committees," which he said Peters organized, would "lead in taking over the Government" at a critical time.

Officials such as Governors or Senators who resisted would be liquidated, Malkin testified.

Hewitt said that "from the first day I was in the party I was instructed that the United States was a citadel of capitalism, the main obstacle to Markist-Leninist success, and this obstacle must be destroyed."

Peters was among those who gave him this instruction, the witness said.

Chambers, a Time magazine editor and a key witness in the Un-American Activities Committee's probe of alleged Communist infiltration of the Government, made his charges against Peters at two sessions before the committee, the latest here yesterday.

The deportation hearing continues tomorraw.

dents on "irresponsible hoodlum Ku Klux Klan elements" and said a majority of the people of the South "oppose that sort of thing."

Henry Wallace heard about Mr. Truman' statement while motoring from Charlotte, N. C., to Hickory, N. C., according to a dispatsch from Post Reporter Edward T. Folliard, and issued the following statement:

"I'm glad to see the President has joined so many of the Southern Governors in deploring events of this kind."

Asked what Governors he had in mind, Wallace mentioned Gov. Gregg Cherry, of North Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, vice presidential nominee on the States Rights (Dixiecrat) ticket.

Pvt. Dowling To Be Fined, Not Fired

The Commissioners yesterday overrode a police trial board recommendation to dismiss Pvt. Talbert E. Dowling, 38, from the force, and fixed his penalty at a $200 fine.

Dowling had appealed to the Commissioners after the trial board, on August 6, found him guilty of being under the influence of alcoholic beverages while on duty. The board unanimously recommended dismissal.

The Commissioners' action restores Dowling to the force, from which he had been suspended since July 31, date of the incident that led to trial board action. He was attached to the Fifth Precinct. Police said he is expected to return to duty there today. He lives at 1810 2d st. nw.

Trial board action followed testimony by Lieut. W. P. Barnes, of No. 5 precinct, that Dowling appeared to be drunk when he reported to the station to go off duty at 4 p. m. on the day of his suspension. Dowling produced two witnesses to testify he was not drunk when they saw him at 3:30 p. m., and he told the board he had not had a drink at any time during the day.

Atomic Developments To Be Reviewed

Developments in atomic energy research over the past 10 months will be reviewed by representatives of the American, British and Canadian Atomic Energy Commissions September 6-8, it was announced yesterday.

The group will meet at Harwell, England.

Among other things, the representatives will determine what information on atomic research may be published and what should be kept secret.

Seven Americans will attend.

Fire Alarm Called Plea For Help

A 23-year-old soldier, who declared he was only trying to get police help because he had been robbed, was charged yesterday with pulling a false alarm of fire.

The soldier, Vytol Ziaukes, stationed at Arlington Hall, Va., told Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon at first that he didn't remember pulling a fire alarm at 8th and Q sts. nw, about 4:45 a. m. yesterday, but later said he had pulled it "because I wanted to get police up there."

Ziaukes, who said he was a stranger in town, told the court he had gone with some people he didn't know to a place he didn't know, where they robbed him of $80 and threw him down the stairs.

"I stopped a police car and asked them to go upstairs with me to get my money back, but they laughed at me," he declared. It was then he may have pulled the alarm, he said.

One of several witnesses, who said they saw Ziaukes near the fire alarm box at the time the alarm was sent in, testified she actually saw him break the glass with a brick. Judge McMahon delayed sentencing the soldier, pending further investigation.

Two other men, charged with six counts each of turning in false fire alarms, were granted a jury trial, set for October 21, by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott yesterday.

Arrested August 25, after Police Inspector George Wallrodt watched them pull several alarms, they were Lester Cicala, 27, of 1321 B st. ne., and Terrell Roberts, jr., 26, of 7191 Tucker rd. se. Bond was continued at $500 each.

Rule Called 'Thought Control'

testimony of Dr. Lowery Calhoun, of the Yale Divinity School, who characterized the FCC decision as "a tissue of naivete and contradictory argument."

The FCC ruling, known as the "Scott" decision, was issued in 1946 and subsequently has been the subject of heated controversy in the radio field. Representative Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.), chairman of the Special House Investigating Committee, has called the decision a possible move "to drive religion from the air." The committee was holding the current hearings, he said yesterday, to find out if the FCC had any legal authority to promulgate any such ruling.

The decision involved the demand of Robert Harold Scott of Palo Alto, Calif., that licenses of several radio stations be revoked because they refused to allot him time to argue "against the existence of God."

The FCC rejected the demand, but at the same time handed down a lengthy opinion on the subject of freedom of religion and the right to arguments regarding it over the air. It was this decision that the Rev. Dr. Calhoun described as "quite badly constructed." He termed its definition of atheism as "pathetically incompetent."

Petty told the committee yesterday that the decision violated the freedom of speech provision of the constitution, the FCC Act and numerous court decisions.

Frank Robertson, former general counsel for the FCC and now a radio law practitioner in Washington, testified that radio stations generally feared that, as the result of the ruling, hey could not deny time to Atheists and were "disturbed" by the situation.

In the Scott decision the FCC said that "freedom of religious belief necessarily carries with it freedom to disbelieve, and freedom of speech means freedom to express disbelief as well as belief."

Earl Godwin, a Washington radio commentator, told the committee that broadcasts of Atheist programs would end "to undermine the faith and strength of the coming generation."

In his attack on the testimony of the Rev. Dr. Calhoun, Smith, speaking both as president of the AAA and an organization he called the "National Liberal League," said:

"I think the members of the FCC have a better understanding of theology than the professor. Of course I'm a Harvard man and he is not."

The Rev. Louis Durell, of the Dominican House of Studies, Catholic University, read the script of a radio talk made by the Rev. Ignatius Smith, dean of the Theological School of Catholic University, over radio station WHAM, Rochester, N. Y., on October 6, 1946. Atheists contended they were attacked in this broadcast.

Committee Counsel Frank T. Bow suggested that it was a complaint by the atheist that caused the FCC to hold up for a time renewal of the station's permanent license.

1029 24-Year-Olds Register in District

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

The peacetime draft yesterday moved smoothly through its second day in the District as 1029 men born in 1923 visited the four city-wide registration centers to sign up for military service.

Frank D. Norton, deputy draft director for the District, said that 310 24-year-olds registered at Dunbar High School, 251 at the District Building, and 234 each at the National Guard Armory and the Municipal Center.

Figures for men who signed up at the firehouses, the Federal Government centers, and at their place of employment will not be available until late today, he said.

Men born in 1923 will finish registering today. Thursday and Friday, men born in 1924 will sign up and men born in 1925 will register Saturday and Tuesday, September 7. There will be no registration Sunday or Labor Day. The registration will close September 18 with 18-year-olds.

Registrants' Cards Sorted

Norton reported that 4428 25-year-olds registered here Monday. District Selective Service headquarters, 1901 D st. nw., is in receipt of "all but a few" of Monday's Government and private business registrations.

The cards are now being separated into stacks of Washington registrants and out-of-town registrants, Norton said. The next step will be the further separation of D. C. cards into draft board areas and the mailing of out-of-town cards to the draft office of the State concerned.

Questionnaires will be mailed out "the latter part of this week" to the oldest age group, Norton said.

Meanwhile, the armed forces today will open their ranks to 18-year-olds for September quotas of one-year enlistments.

A quota of 21 Greater Washington men has been set for September one-year enlistments in the Navy. The Naval Recruiting Station at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave., however, has enough 18-year-olds on its waiting list to carry it through most of October.

September Marine Quota 6

Lieut. Comdr. Richard T. Fahy, station commanding officer, estimated that men who get on the waiting list today "may be in the Navy in late October, but probably in November."

The Marine Corps has a quota of six men for September from Greater Washington, Capt. G. S. Plantier, commanding officer of the recruiting station at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., said. While the September quota had not arrived at the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., it was estimated that "about 100 men" would be accepted for the one-year hitch during this month.

The Army and Air Force will take men on a first-come, first-served basis.

D. C. Registration Hours

From 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, draft-eligible men may register at the District Building, Municipal Center, National Guard Armory, Dunbar High School, any of the city's 34 firehouses, or at American University's Leonard Student Center at Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. nw. and the School of Public Affairs Building, 19th and F sts. nw.

Men born in 1926 will register September 8-9; those born in 1927, September 10-11; those in 1928, September 13-14; those in 1929, September 15-16; men born before September 19, 1930, September 17-18.

Men not 18 by September 19 register on their eighteenth birthday or within five days with their draft board.

In Montgomery County, the Rockville draft board, located at the postoffice building, registered 144 men Monday, 114 yesterday; Bethesda-Chevy Chase board, at the Community and Recreation Center, signed up 94 Monday, 90 yesterday; and the Silver Spring board, at Jesup Blair House, Georgia ave. and Blair rd., registered 234 Monday, 235 yesterday.

288 Register in Arlington

A total of 288 men registered in Arlington County Monday and 275 registered yesterday. Registration centers are located on the second floor of the Jones building, 3150 Wilson blvd., near N. Hudson st.; John Marshall School, 4751 N. 25th st., and Nellie Curtis School, 712 S. 23rd st. On Saturdays, registration will also be held at several schools yet to be announced.

In Alexandria, 446 men registered Monday, 411 yesterday. Centers are located at Maury, Jefferson, Mount Vernon, George Mason, Lee and Parker-Gray Schools. Other centers are the draft board office, Room 309, Postoffice Building, and, on Saturdays only, the Cameron st. and Pendleton St. Recreation Centers.

In Prince Georges County, 238 men signed up Monday at Hyattsville Board No. 55 located at the County Service Building. Yesterday's figures will not be available until today. Men from Vansville, Berwyn, Riverdale, Hyattsville and Chillum register in Hyattsville.

Register in Prince Georges

Other Prince Georges County registration centers operated by Upper Marlboro boards 56 and 57, register men at the following places:

Draft Board No. 56 registers at Laurel and Marlboro High School and Bladensburg Elementary School—for youths from Laurel, Bowie, Lanham, Bladensburg, Kent, Marlboro, Queen Anne and Mellwood election district.

Draft Board No. 57 registers at Surrattsville High School at Clinton and Brandywine, Capitol Heights Elementary Schools—for youths from Surrattsville, Piscataway, Brandywine, Nottingham, Aquasco, Oxon Hill, Spaulding and Seat Pleasant districts.

Draft-eligible men of Fairfax County are being registered at Herndon, Vienna, McLean, Falls Church, Bailey's Cross Roads, Lorton, Groveton, Annandale, Centreville, Franconia, Burke, Fairfax and Fairfax Station. Totals to date from Fairfax County will be announced today.

Down, But Not Hatless . . .

TRAFFIC VICTIM UNRUFFLED—Mrs. Katherine J. Ambursen, 64, of West Clifton Terrace Apartments, still wearing her hat, is placed in an ambulance after being struck by a streetcar yesterday at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Police said she was crossing the Avenue when a traffic light changed and she was "brushed" by the trolley when she stepped back into a safety zone to avoid passing automobiles. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for bruises on the face and was released

3 Hurt Here In 2 Traffic Accidents

Three persons were injured in two separate traffic accidents here yesterday.

Mrs. Katharine J. Ambursen, 64, of West Clifton Terrace Apartments, 1340 Clifton st. nw., suffered bruises to her lips when she was knocked down by a streetcar at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., about 12:30 p. m.

Police said Mrs. Ambursen was crossing the avenue when a traffic light changed. She stepped back and "over" a safety zone to avoid passing automobiles, police said. She was treated at Emergency Hospital and released. The streetcar operator was listed as Clyde E. Davis, 48, of 223 R st. ne.

An hour earlier, at Davenport and 48th sts. nw., William Ranwick, 65, of 4858 Albemarle st. nw., suffered undetermined injuries when the car he was driving collided with a Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. repair truck operated by Robert Burdick, 28, 3525 Nimitz rd., Kensington, Md.

Police said both men were taken to Emergency Hospital and admitted. Hospital officials, police reported, said Ranwick suffered head and chest injuries and is "in undetermined condition." Burdick suffered bruises.

Chemists Told of Blood Test For Cancer, and New Drugs

versity of Vienna and for seven years head of the chemical laboratories of the Cancer Institute, Manila, Philippines Islands, told of results of his experiments with almost pessimistic caution.

Virtually assigned to find a blood test for the detection of cancer, he spent much of his time at the Cancer Institute in Manila and lately at Mount Sinai Hospital, Chicago, on the project. Out of the research, he said, "evolved" his present test, a time lapse check of the interaction in salt solution between albumin and globulin of the blood tested.

Liver Cancer Hinted

Dr. Willheim said he found that in 70 per cent of his testings of blood of persons known to have cancer this interaction time was slowed appreciably. He said he found virtually the same condition, however, in cases of liver damage, leading him to believe such cases may be cancer-caused.

Much work still remains, he said, before he can determine if the test will ever prove of practical value in cancer detection. This includes, he said, refining the present test and analyzing the interaction process.

Discovery of the new pain-killing drug was revealed by chemists of Smith, Kline and French pharmaceutical laboratories, of Philadelphia. It is called "SKF 438-A," which is company-initialed for its full designation, 1-(B-dimethylamino-ethoxy)-4-butyl-isoquinoline.

Anesthesia Lasts 3 Hours

Human beings looking for a stiff pain-killer, however, were warned by the chemists that SKF 538-A has only been used on lesser animals in experiments to date. On rabbits, said the chemists, the drug in dilution as low as one one-hundredth of 1 per cent produced local anesthesia lasting over three hours.

By comparative tests, they said, similar strength dilutions of aan-other anesthetic, dibucaine, lasted but 69 minutes; cocaine, 18 minutes, and procaine, 2 minutes.

Yesterday's paper reporting initial findings on the new drug was prepared by James W. Wilson and Glenn E. Ullyot of the Philadelphia laboratories; Norman D. Dawson of Washington Missionary College, and Walter Brooks of the University of Pennsylvania, all of whom contributed to the research.

Still in Laboratory Stage

The new fungicide, hailed as so deadly for athlete's foot and scalp fingworm (as well as other fungi) also is still in the laboratory stage, according to the report presented to the Society's division on medicinal chemistry by Dr. F. E. Cislak, director of research, Reilly Tar and Chemical Corp., of Indianapolis.

The chemical, Echridine, said Dr. Cislak, is a derivative of pyridine. Pyridine compounds, he explained, are recovered from the coke oven gases of steel mills and are valuable compounds which up to 10 years ago were burned off as useless.

A series of new drugs which may prove satisfactory in periodic treatment for hypertension or for reduction of dangerously elevated blood pressure was described to the same session by a group of chemists of Wellcome Research Laboratories, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., the Sterling-Winthrop Research Institute, of Rensselaer, N. Y., and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio.

The drugs, called "depressers," were first discovered, they said, in impurities of another compound prepared for routine testing. Ordinarily such impurities are discarded. In this instance, however, when the special properties of the "impurities" were discovered, the compound was thrown away and the "impurities" saved. Like the other drugs reported on, these too need clinical testing before their value to humans is fully determined.

The sessions on medical chemistry were held at Hotel Mayflower, with F. F. Blicke, of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., serving as chairman.

Dr. Ralph W. G. Wyckoff, of the laboratory of physical biology, National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., made a plea to the chemists for more emphasis on visual chemistry.

Microscope's Uses Untapped

A noted researchist with the electron miscroscope, he told them that potentialities of the wonder machine are virtually untapped.

Under favorable conditions of study, he said, it is possible to study "objects" as small as 20 angstroms in length. (It would take 12,500,000 objects 20 angstroms in length to add up to 1 inch, it was explained.)

One of the immediately obvious uses of electron microscopy, he said, is to study viruses, such as those causing polio, influenza and others plaguing mankind.

Cellophane Patches Artery

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The use of pieces of cellophane as patches to prevent blowouts in the great artery of human beings is announced in the current issue of the American Heart Journal.

The aorta, main channel carrying blood from the heart to the entire body, sometimes bulges on one side, exactly like an inner tube that is about to blow. The potential blowouts which were prevented by cellophane patches were caused by syphilis. They were described by Dr. J. K. Poppe of Portland, Oreg.

Six persons were treated. In each case the aorta was bared by surgery, and a piece of cellophane cut to fit over the bulge. Where possible, the cellophane was wrapped entirely around the great blood vessel.

The six are all alive and the operation was done on some of them two years ago.

The cellophane patch in every case, Dr. Poppe reported, eased pains that had been due to throbbing and pulsating of the bulge. The patch also caused growth of dense tissues in the aorta and those parts of the chest on which it pressed. These new tissues resemble scars. They strengthen the weakened part of the artery

Tobacco Export 'Deal' Questioned

By The Associated Press

Fear that some types of tobacco are not getting a fair deal in European recovery shipments was expressed yesterday by Representative Virgil Chapman (D., Ky.).

He said there should be larger exports of burley, dark air cured and dark fire cured than have been scheduled under the Marshall Plan.

Chapman said he called tobacco leaders of Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina to a conference here because he was "apprehensive" that these tobaccos "were not fairly participating in shipments to European countries, as contemplated by the Barkley amendment (concerning surplus crops) to the economic cooperation act."

Bandit-Chasers Win Awards of the Month . . .

The Washington Post

COPS DECORATED—Police Inspector Floyd Truscott (left) awards medals to Pvts. John B. Kline (center) of First Precinct and Jesse Johnson of Second Precinct. The two were named Policemen of the Month of July for their work in capturing a bandit suspect during a running gun battle. Police officials and friends of men witnessed ceremony yesterday

Two police privates—one of them a rookie, who took part in capture of an armed bandit here in July, were honored yesterday as the outstanding policemen for that month.

They were Pvt. John B. Kline, 28, of the First Precinct, a policeman for only 11 months, and Pvt. Jesse Johnson, 28, of the Second Precinct.

In a ceremony in the line-up room at the Detective Bureau at police headquarters, Kline and Johnson were decorated with medals by Inspector Floyd Truscott, acting superintendent while Maj. Robert J. Barrett is on leave.

Kline and Johnson were voted Washington's policemen of distinction for July by the Award of Merit Committee. This committee has four members, one from each daily newspaper in Washington, and each month it selects the city's outstanding policeman or policemen.

The two policemen participated in the capture of Joseph H. Sullivan, 30-year-old former Army lieutenant, after he had allegedly held up the Mutual Credit Co., 901 10th st. nw., at gunpoint and gotten away with $96.

According to the police version, after Sullivan held up Herbert Becker, 36, and his wife, Rena, at the loan company, Becker ran to the street and shouted, "holdup! holdup!" The bandit, waving an automatic in one hand, became the object of a street chase. He ran down K st. to 10th st.

Kline, directing traffic at 9th st. and New York ave. nw., became aware of the commotion and left his post to fire two shots at the fleeing bandit. None of them took effect. The bandit pumped twice on his automatic at Kline but the automatic did not fire.

The gunman then commandeered a cab but its driver drove into a traffic jam at 12th and L sts. nw. The bandit jumped from the cab.

Johnson had left his traffic post, at 9th and K sts. nw., and hopped aboard an automobile to join the chase. Johnson fired one shot which missed its mark as the bandit sped north on 11th st. to an alley at the rear of 1101 L st. nw.

"He trained his gun on me over his shoulder as he was running and I kept hollaring to him to drop his gun or I'd shoot him," Johnson said later. As Johnson closed in, the gunman lost his courage and dropped his weapon.

Johnson, with five previous commendations to his credit, held the man until reinforcements arrived.

Police said Sullivan was later identified as the man who had held up the American Airline office of $399; the Western Union office, 1019 10th st. nw., of $32; the Western Union office, 1720 Connecticut ave. nw., of $40; Lenders, Inc., 7904 Georgia ave. nw., of $700, and attempted to rob Saunders Rent-a-Car place, 811 12th st. nw.

Police said Sullivan, an unemployed bookkeeper living at 4611 Hillside rd. se., confessed he staged the holdups to pay off debts. Sullivan is now being held in $10,000 bond for trial in District Court September 20 on robbery charge.

Yesterday's ceremony at police headquarters was witnessed by friends of the two policemen, police officials and several of the holdup victims. Kline lives at 4612 Lewis ave., Suitland, Md., and Johnson at 3738 Hayes st. ne.

J. J. Curtin Given Video Set on Retiring

John Joseph Curtin, 70, retiring after 44 years in the District Highway department, was presented a television set yesterday by his fellow employes.

Curtin

It was Curtin's last day in office as associate engineer in charge of sidewalk and alley projects. He started with the highway department as a chainman after having worked for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

He said he is planning to take things easy for a while, and then, perhaps, do engineering consultant work. He lives at 215 7th st. ne.

A native of the District, Curtin attended parochial schools here, Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md., and Georgetown University. He is married and has five children.

Along with the television set went the applause and greetings of some 80 fellow employes who gathered in a brief goodby ceremony in the District Buildingfl. The television set was presented by J. N. Robertson, deputy director of the Highway Department.

Australian Gas Ration Reduced 20 Per Cent

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 31 (AP). Australia announced today a reduction of 20 per cent in gasoline rations for private use and 10 per cent for other use, effective October 1.

On the Town

THE Lotus revue this week features the Wallen Twins in the headline spot. The girls, who actually look like twins, are a singing and dancing team who even make a production of changing their shoes in the middle of the act. Their dancing consists of tap acrobatics with a lot of precision.

Martez and Lucia specialize in South of the Border dancing with a novel twist. Martez balances Lucia on his head and proceeds to go through a slow rhumba (at least our dancing instructor called that particular rhythm a rhumba). Rhumba, samba or one-step, it's still a neat trick.

Lady Frances sings a few Irish lullabies while she goes through a fairly stock routine of tricks.

What with politics the favorite topic of discussion, a few restaurants and clubs around the country are cashing in on people's political affiliations by naming choice dishes or new discoveries after the candidates.

The latest one at Olmsted's is called the Thomas E. Dewey salad. They couldn't call it the plain old Dewey salad because a few people still remember the sailor Dewey. According to the press agentry, the chef at Olmsted's got the chef of the Governor's mansion in Albany to try the salad out on the man it was named for. The salad is said to have met with Dewey's approval, and in case any of you Republicans in town (and people have begun to admit they're Republicans in Washington lately) are planning to entertain Dewey in the near future we have the recipe for the salad. Drop us a line and we'll print it.

ALFRED'S restaurant has been getting a play from the dinner crowd on fight nights. They come up to worry a steak to death and then sit around for the televised fights. For that reason Alfred's is serving a la carte until 2 a. m. After all, who can go through a strenuous fight without being hungry later?

The Shoreham Terrace probably will be closing September 19 and the Blue Room will open the night of the 20th. The Palladian Room has a tentative opening date of the 23d and a well known New York outfit (small in number but big in ability) will furnish the music. The booking won't be definite until noon today.

Meanwhile the show there is opened by the Emerald Sisters, an acrobatic team. They do have one cute routine consisting of a rolling somersault which moves along the floor, goes on top of a table, over the table and on down the other side. For some reason words like "rough cut gems," "unfinished stones," and such kept running through our head that night.

The feature act is the team of Daniele and Danice. They have two particularly cute numbers consisting of an old time can dance that adds a bit of welcome spice to the Shoreham and a Louisiana swamp number that is most descriptive. Unless it rains and the show is put on in the Blue Room instead of the Terrace you won't be able to see the Louisiana number due to the fact that it needs a little explanation before the number is put on. Without the description people might be inclined to misunderstand it. The routine is a good one, though.

The main dining room in the Roger Smith is open again after a bout with the air-conditioners. The room is ready now though. The Cafe Caprice in the Roger Smith is about set to present a series of New York pianists pretty soon. Booking is almost complete.

Iowa Corn Crop Not Damaged Seriously by Hot Weather

Reports that hot weather had seriously damaged the corn prospects in Iowa were denied in the Weekly Weather and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau last night.

Heavy rains fell last Friday in northwestern Iowa and Sunday in the northeast and central portions, the bureau reported.

"Rains removed immediate threat of serious damage," the report stated. However, it added that "corn on thinner soils in the northeast badly fired, with yields materially below expectations." Northeastern Iowa is not the chief corn section, however.

In Maryland, the report stated: "Corn generally good to very good. Soybeans good. Late blight and septoria causing considerable loss in tomatoes. Tobacco about one-third harvested and high temperatures accentuated firing. Quality of hay improved. Pastures generally good."

In Virginia the bureau reported "extreme heat retarded activities and dried soil rapidly. Most crops need rain, especially young beans and salad crops in Eastern Shore and Norfolk areas. Much hay harvested. Tobacco harvest progressing favorably. Early corn maturing. Farmers filling silos with corn and soybeans. Pastures continue good to excellent."

Word in Law Stalls Food Drop

sion ending at 7 Sunday morning, June 20. The House previously had passed the Hope bill providing for extension of present price supports for one year. The Senate had passed the Aiken bill for a new overall farm law, providing a graduating scale of price supports under a new movable parity formula that would have slightly reduced parity on most items.

As a last minute compromise both houses adopted the Hope bill for one year, and the Aiken bill after January 1, 1950.

Supporters of the payment or subsidy provision for price supports argued that under the present law the consumer-taxpayer pays twice for potato support. He pays once as consumer in high prices. He pays again as taxpayer in supplying funds to dump the surplus. Such dumping includes selling products such as potatoes at "distress" prices to charitable institutions, distillers, for livestock feed or to starch processors.

Administration leaders had urged the payment or subsidy system for several years. It was opposed by several farm organizations, who wanted to maintain market prices. They are fearful that the subsidy system would be difficult to defend.

It also was opposed by many members of Congress who in the last minute rush on June 20 voted for it. Some frankly said they feared the effect upon farm voters receiving Government checks just before election.

Price supports for potatoes have led to widespread attacks upon the entire price support program. So far this year the Government had paid out almost 20 million dollars to support prices for the early potato crop. This may reach 35 million before the season is over. Support of late potatoes will cost more.

Although the potato acreage has been decreased drastically in recent years, improved seed, fertilizers, insecticides and weed-killing chemicals have more than offset the acreage reduction. The average yield per acre of potatoes was 139 bushels in the 10 years from 1937 to 1946. Last year improved methods brought more than 189 bushels per acre.

Officials are afraid to decrease the acreage much more. If one large commercial area should have a crop failure such a decrease would mean a serious shortage of America's main vegetable.

Lawyer Hired To Fight Co-op At Broadmoor

Tenants of the Broadmoor Apartments have hired a lawyer to represent them as a result of a move to convert the 197-unit building into a cooperative.

A spokesman for the tenants said yesterday that Spencer Gordon, a senior member of the law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb, has agreed to represent "a majority of the tenants."

Gordon, now on vacation, has not indicated what action he plans. A seven-man tenant committee headed by Maj. Gen. L. D. Gasser, retired Army officer, will act as liaison with Gordon, a spokesman said.

The tenants met last week and decided to resist the movement to convert the building into cooperative apartments. At that time, they contributed what they described as a "generous sum of money" to hire "eminent counsel."

The tenants have protested action of the Broadmoor Cooperative Apartments, Inc., headed by Edmund J. Flynn, real estate broker, because they declared the cooperative's prospectus does not disclose true facts and conditions at the apartment.

In a statement issued after their meeting, they declared they felt "that the refrigeration, plumbing and elevator service had deteriorated over a period of years and no improvements or replacements have been made."

Flynn has contended the building is in good shape, and that the cooperative plan at Broadmoor would stand the test of a court case. He has stated tenants' objections are "without any substance—it's no different from selling an individual home."

Otis & Co. Asks Court to Dismiss Action by SEC

By The Associated Press

Otis & Co., Cleveland investment firm, yesterday asked United States Dstrict Court here to dismiss actions brought against it by the SEC following collapse of a 10-milliion-dollar stock deal with the Kaiser-Frazer Corp.

Thurman Arnold, counsel for Otis & Co., and for Cyrus Eaton, its principal stockholder, told a reporter it is his position that the Securities and Exchange Commission "has no damn business" investigating a contract between his client and the Kaiser-Frazer Corp.

Arnold said the SEC acted beyond its jurisdiction in the matter, declaring that breach of contract is "something for a court—not an administrative body—to determine."

His statement came with the filing of a brief answering charges brought against Eaton and Otis & Co. by the SEC.

That agency had asked a court order compelling Marvin C. Harris and Allan Hull, Cleveland attorneys, to teestify in connection with the Otis-Kaiser-Frazer affair.

. . . For Distinguished Service in Journalism

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON NEWSMEN CITED—Bert Andrews(center) of the New York Herald Tribune and Alan Barth (right) of The Washington Post receive bronze plaques from Luther Huston, Washington bureau manager of the New York Times. The awards were made by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, to the newsmen for their "distinguished service in American journalism." Huston is president of the fraternity

Two Washington newsmen, Alan Barth of The Washington Post and Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington bureau, were formally awarded bronze plaques yesterday by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, for their "distinguished service in American journalism."

The Washington men received 2 of the fraternity's 10 national awards in various fields of journalism, which were first announced last May. The plaques were presented at a luncheon meeting of the group in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

Barth, on the staff of the Washington Post since 1943, was cited for editorials that the panel of judges called "informative, persuasive and written in clean, clear English." Barth has recently received a Nieman fellowship for one year of study at Harvard for his editorials.

Andrews, Washington bureau manager of the New York Herald Tribune since 1941, was honored for his series of stories on "The State Department Security Case," recording the histories of 10 State Department employes fired as "potential security risks." He has also received the Pulitzer Prize Award, the Raymond Clapper Memorial Award and the Heywood Broun award for this series.

Said the judges: "Andrews displayed initiative in ferreting out the facts, developed a whole, full story, and through fearless reporting forced the State Department to change a policy."

NAACP Urges Police to Cease Pool Segregation

A protest against police action in "denying a democratic use of the Rosedale swimming pool" was filed with Metropolitan Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

William Allyn Hill, NAACP executive secretary, wrote Major Barrett that "no law prevents District children from using play areas of their choice." Hill said Inspector Clarence Talley had "assisted in preventing Negro children from using the Rosedale pool," and asked Barrett to instruct all police officers as to "the strict administration of doubtful recreation board by-laws."

The recreation department has an announced policy of segregating use of play facilities it controls in Washington.

This policy has been supported by board chairman Harry S. Wender, who declared it was "specifically spelled out" in congressional legislation that the program should be operated on a colored and white basis as set up by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Order of Purple Heart Files Bankruptcy Plea

Chicago, Aug. 31, (AP).—The military Order of the Purple Heart, Inc., a national veterans' organization, with headquarters in Chicago, filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in Federal Court today listing assets of $5533 and liabilities of $42,532.

Attorney Romano E. Posanski, said the proceedings were forced by two creditors who have filed suits against the group for money due them.

Posanski said the organization has 175,009 members and 270 chapters.

8 Appointments To Falls Church Posts Confirmed

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown yesterday confirmed appointment of eight men to city government posts in the new city of Falls Church. All eight had been recommended by the Falls Church City Council. New posts came into being when Falls Church became a city on August 16.

Approved were Commissioner of Revenue LaRue Van Meter, 121 Lee st.; City Treasurer James E. Ferguson, 125 S. Spring st.; Electoral Board members Lawrence E. Laing, 111 S. Oak st., J. Morton Franklin, 310 Sycamore st., and Franklin Thackrey, 102 West Rosemary lane, and justices of the peace W. F. Edmonds, 133 East Broad st.; Clarence M. Dale, 396 N. Washington st., and John E. Blackburn, 308 Grove st.

Jet Fighter To Try for New Mark at Races

Cleveland, Aug. 31 (AP).—The United States Air Force will attempt to set a new world speed record with its North American F-86 jet fighter at the National Air Races Saturday.

The present record is 650.79 miles per hour, set by Marine Lieut. Col. Marion E. Carl at Muroc, Calif., last August 25.

Air Force officials announced the forthcoming attempt today and said it would be the first time in modern aviation history the public will have an opportunity to see a world speed record attempt.

Because weather is such an important factor, the F-86 will make the run each of the three days of the National Air Races program. However, if a new record is set on Saturday, the runs Sunday and Monday will be merely untimed demonstrations.

The pilot on the speed runs will be Maj. Richard L. Johnson of the Air Materiel Command flight test section at Wright-Patterson Air Base near Dayton, Ohio.

The attempt will be made in full combat readiness, carrying machineguns and ammunition.

At the same time, the Navy will be flying the 2000-mile Bendix race course from Long Beach, Calif., to Cleveland carrying guns and ammunition.

The F-86, which does not yet have a popular name, probably is the world's fastest combat aircraft. The Air Force announces its official speed reading as "over 650 miles an hour." In power dives it is reported to have exceeded the speed of sound on many occasions.

Troy, N. Y., Publisher Killed in Fall

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—David B. Plum, publisher of the Record newspapers, was killed today in a fall at the newspaper plant.

Plum, 78, was inspecting an addition to the building when he fell 20 feet from the second floor into a pit where a new press is to be installed.

But, most people still have the habit. Down at R. MARS we've decided they must be feeding those cows on the long green—and we don't mean grass. The other day our wife asked us if they were digging potatoes out of gold mines now. Well, we hate to say it, but we can't do much for you (or ourselves) at the butchers, the bakers, the candlestick makers—BUT, if you would like to join many others in giving H. C. L. a good swift kick in the shins by saving from 12 to 40% on your household goods, learn how your group and you can become eligible to buy at R. MARS wholesale prices—and put what you save into better eating.

We're Cutting ..... The H.C.L.*

AMERICAN Commodity Dollars today are buying lots less than they should. At R. MARS . . . The Contract Co., we don't pretend to be economists, BUT—modestly—we believe we have evolved the best long range answer to the problem of that shrinking dollar.

BRIEFLY, our answer is to give our Group Buyers the economies and savings inherent in our regular wholesale and export business. These economies include mass purchasing and distribution from our New York City and Atlantic City offices, and our Washington and Baltimore showrooms and warehouses. AND they include GOOD SERVICE without "frills"—such as unwise credit, which must eventually be paid for by the consumer in the form of higher prices. TRUE, WE HAVE CREDIT FACILITIES, BUT NOT THE EXPENSIVE "DOLLAR DOWN, DOLLAR WHEN YOU CATCH 'EM" TYPE. Nor are we equipped to accept purchases of 80c worth, "charge it and deliver it." We cannot and will not admit the general public to our showrooms, as it would defeat our plan.

LAST YEAR through our Group Buying Plan we distributed millions of dollars worth of the finest merchandise at savings prices to thousands of customers in the Washington area, including Congressmen, top officials, Embassies, government employees, Post Exchange and Ship Service members and many others qualified to buy here. Hundreds of organizations have made the easy arrangements for their members or personnel to shop here. Thus, they are privileged to buy under the same conditions as hotels, hospitals, institutions, and other wholesale buyers. Increasingly successful in this area since 1937, our Group Buying Plan is now repeating that success in Baltimore. Our New York City and Atlantic City offices are equipped to handle only hotel, hospital, institutional, store and export trade.

IF YOU are interested in getting GOOD furniture, rugs, linens, or electrical appliances at prices which will save you 12 to 40%, we invite you to request the literature which explains this plan. If you are already qualified, be sure to bring your identification when visiting us.

Wallace's Raid

The police chief of Winston-Salem, N. C., who told hecklers of Henry Wallace that they were doing just what the Communists wanted them to do showed penetrating insight. It must be self-evident that the provocative Mr. Wallace has not carried his campaign to the South with any real hope of collecting any electoral votes there. Quite possibly, then, his motive for invading the domain of the Dixiecrats was to be made a martyr. Some very foolish Southerners in the half dozen Carolina communities he visited during the past couple of days have now done the job for him.

Whatever may have impelled Mr. Wallace to travel south and however offensive to local prejudices his ideas may have been, the treatment he was accorded quite warranted his query, "Am I in America?" There was certainly nothing American about the ugly mob violence that silenced him. Reviled and pelted by missiles of all sorts, he stood his ground, by common account of the correspondents present, with good humor and great physical courage. Certainly it was Mr. Wallace and not the hoodlums attacking him who emerged from the disgraceful encounter with the moral victory.

The effect of all this is to fortify the faith of those who look on Mr. Wallace as a new Messiah, himself perhaps among them, to strengthen his pretended status as the one true defender of civil rights, and to foster his own view of himself as a symbol of persecution. Moreover, it affords the propaganda artists in the Kremlin magnificent material for deriding American institutions and political procedures. Mr. Wallace, allowed to speak, is not much to be feared. Mr. Wallace, silenced by bigotry, can become a rallying point for all the disillusioned and discontented. In the free competition of the marketplace, his ideas can be dealt with by the common sense of the American people.

French Dilemma

After the failure of M. Ramadier to form a new French government a successful effort was made by another former Premier, M. Schuman, who in a pleasant understatement to the correspondents in Paris observed that the task would not be an easy one. Nor was it made any easier by M. Schuman's announcement that his cabinet will exclude both Communists and Gaullists.

What this means, of course, is that the Socialists have refused to collaborate with any followers of General de Gaulle and that M. Schuman's own party, the Popular Republicans, has refused any collaboration with the Communists. This, then, obliges M. Schuman to seek a precarious majority among the Popular Republicans, the Socialists, the Radical Socialists and a few minor parties of the right center.

It is also very doubtful that M. Schuman's government will have the boldness to grapple with the financial problem that lies at the root of the current crisis. What wrecked the cabinet of M. Andre Marie after only three weeks in office was the frank disclosure of the fiscal situation by M. Paul Reynaud, Minister of Finance. M. Reynaud, an economist of the old-fashioned school, said bluntly that there is no remedy for the crisis except increased taxation and a reduction of government expenditures through a dismantling of a portion of the bureaucracy. Such proposals as M. Reynaud asserts to be necessary would not be accepted very cheerfully under any form of government; under a government by legislature, such as exists in France, radical and unpopular reforms have little chance of approval.

The program proposed by M. Reynaud looked toward a reduction of government interference with economic matters and a return to what in this country is called "free enterprise." This is contrary to the theoretic principles of both Popular Republicans and Socialists, the one group insisting that economics are subordinate to ethical considerations and the other, of course, pledged to support the program of nationalization.

However, M. Reynaud's proposals, difficult as they are for the Assembly to swallow, represent only one horn of the dilemma facing the supporters of the Fourth Republic. The other horn is represented by the knowledge that any aggravation of the financial crisis merely makes more probable the eventual return to power of General de Gaulle. How intense is the fear of General de Gaulle is indicated in the recent decision of the Assembly to postpone the cantonal elections that were scheduled for next October. M. de Gaulle's followers have been confidently looking forward to an even stronger showing in these elections than in the municipal elections of last year, in which the Gaullist party, called Rally of the French People, gained 40 per cent of the total of votes cast.

Security And Liberty

Last week we noted that the Committee on Un-American Activities had responded to persistent criticism by rectifying some of its methods. Further evidence along the same line may be found in the committee's interim report. Its tone is more sober and restrained than that of some of its past reports. In dealing with the notorious Chambers-Hiss controversy the committee summarizes the evidence and relates its tentative findings to that evidence. No final conclusions are drawn, and its threatened recommendation of perjury charges against Mr. Hiss or Mr. Chambers is withheld for further developments.

It may well be that the more serious nature of the charges which the committee is now investigating has had a salutary effect. We hope this is the case. We hope also that the committee will continue to correct its methods, giving attention to major as well as minor defects. For if it succeeds in proving the charges that it is currently exploring—and it appears to be making progress in regard to some of the accusations—the results obtained may seem to excuse the arbitrary procedure that has been followed. That would be especially unfortunate, for every true disciple of democracy knows that a worthy end does not justify ruthless or undemocratic means. Practice counts in our system as much as purpose.

While obviously trying to improve its methods, the committee still tries to excuse the maligning of innocent persons in the process of exposing Communist machinations. Its report says:

> At times, however, your committee is confronted with the necessity of running the risk that a few innocent people may be temporarily embarrassed or the risk that 140 million innocent Americans may be permanently enslaved. When necessary to resolve the relative merits of two such risks as that, your committee holds to the position that its primary responsibility is to that great bulk of our American population . . .

If any such choice had to be made, of course, the over-all national interest would have to prevail. But no such choice of evils is necessary. In our opinion, the committee can carry out its legitimate function and at the same time safeguard individuals from unwarranted slander or misrepresentation. The interim report states the function of the committee to be the presentation of "a clear picture of the extent of disloyal and inimical influences working secretly to destroy our free institutions whether they operate from within or without the Government." We think it is indisputable that discredited methods of inquiry detract from the accomplishment of this aim, because they lead to confusion and divert public attention from the un-American activities which the committee is investigating to the un-American methods employed.

The committee makes a strong case for keeping its hearings open to the public. Actually, however, many of its hearings have been behind closed doors. Not infrequently it has aired grave charges in public and then sought confirmatory evidence in secret sessions. On Monday, moreover, one of its members filled many newspaper columns with details of what he was going to prove before the witness was allowed to tell his own story in public. This contrasts sharply with the accepted procedure of having staffs sift out all charges, interview the key witnesses concerned and test the validity of prospective testimony reflecting upon individuals before they ever get to the hearings stage. Adoption of this tried and tested method by the Thomas Committee would greatly strengthen its position before the people.

With many of the committee's recommendations, such as the indiscriminate opening of the Government's loyalty files and enactment of the more restrictive provisions of the Mundt-Nixon bill, this newspaper has no sympathy. But we are well aware of the baffling problem confronting the United States in coping with "virtual espionage" or "cold-war treason," as the committee calls it. The committee recalls that as long ago as last February Attorney General Clark came out for amendment of the espionage laws so as to enable the Government more adequately to meet the new techniques of the Communists. The recommendations he promised have never gone up to Capitol Hill.

That dilly-dallying in the face of a serious problem has undoubtedly encouraged the extremists to press their own program. It adds point to a suggestion we have previously made—that the President appoint a commission to inquire into how our laws should be tightened up so as to safeguard our institutions from Trojan-horse tactics and at the same time maintain our freedoms.

U.N. News Convention

The convention on freedom of information which the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations Economic and Social Council adopted at Geneva and will send without recommendation to the General Assembly at Paris is an indubitable disappointment even to guarded Western hopes. It does not seem at all likely that the agreement will lift the iron curtain in the slightest or put an end to any of the numerous restraints upon free access to news in the many lands where these are imposed by censorship, discrimination or exclusion. It is a fundamental of Western thought that freedom of information is a powerful promoter of international understanding. But apparently some measure of international understanding is a prerequisite to the very freedom by which it is to be fostered.

The American delegation opposed two amendments introduced by Latin-American states and supported by the Eastern bloc. One of these, sponsored by Colombia, provides that each member country may make and enforce controls over news relating directly to national security. This can mean only censorship, and in an area as broad as any government wishes it to be, since national security nowadays traverses the whole range of national endeavor. The effect of this is to authorize what would be intolerable to free societies and what would at the same time give countenance to severe restrictions upon news in the societies that are not free.

The second amendment, sponsored by Mexico, declares that "nothing in the present convention shall limit the discretion of any contracting state to refuse entry into its territory to any particular person or to restrict the period of his residence . . ." This means that the Soviet Union can go right on excluding critical journalists or that the United States, for that matter—and this country has not been hospitable of late to writers from behind the iron curtain—can do the same on this side. This is, of course, an indisputable attribute of sovereignty. But it is precisely the attribute which an international agreement designed to promote freedom of information should aim to mitigate rather than to perpetuate.

Airline Goose

There is at least a good possibility that in opening the door to another airline fare increase the Civil Aeronautics Board will compound rather than cure the airlines' financial difficulties. Superficially there are many arguments in favor of hiking passenger fares. The certificated airlines lost 16 million dollars during the year ending March 31. The CAB figures that the airlines needed additional revenue of $4.42 per passenger above the $25.60 average fare in order to make a 10 per cent profit. The recent conference of airline executives called by the CAB concluded that the way to overcome this deficit was to up fares 10 per cent, a move that has CAB sanction as soon as new tariffs can be worked out.

The difficulty in such a facile answer to the problem is that it may serve to deplete even further the diminishing airline traffic. For it tends to confirm air transportation as a strictly luxury affair. The airlines already have had two 10 per cent boosts since 1946. Railroad fares, to be sure, also have increased, though not in the same proportion. But it is not plausible that the spiraling airline rates have had something to do with the failure of the postwar traffic expansion to materialize as anticipated?

Something has to be done for the airlines; a regulated industry cannot be expected to absorb losses indefinitely. But a move that will tend to restrict rather than broaden patronage seems pointed in the wrong direction. In this connection the observations of the CAB respecting the elimination of free meals served airline passengers are worth noting; on this one item alone the airlines would have saved 11 million dollars last year. The elimination of other frills might take care of the entire deficit.

In short, what is at stake is whether air transportation is to remain a high-priced commodity available only to a few, or whether the airlines will attempt to recoup their finances by broadening the base of air travel in the hope of attracting more people at lower rates. It seems to us that the air-coach idea often broached deserves some appropriate nudges from the CAB. Perhaps it will receive scrutiny in the multiple investigations now being conducted by the CAB, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Bureau of the Budget. The national defense demands a healthy airline industry, and the Government, because of the outright subsidies now awkwardly disguised as "mail pay," has a vested interest in insuring that the airlines develop along the most efficient lines. In other words, it is partially a governmental responsibility to see that air transportation becomes an instrument that serves all the people.

Soviet Women

The unrest among Soviet women revealed by Alexei P. Pavlov in a recent defense of his government before the United Nations Economic and Social Council sheds a new light on the Kremlin's refusal to let Russian wives of foreigners leave Russia. "Foreigners send their nationals in to recruit agents, especially from among our women," said Mr. Pavlov. "This is the core of the matter." If Russian women are actually as undependable as all this, than it can readily be seen, as Mr. Pavlov puts it, that their desire to go home with their foreign husbands presents an acute security problem.

This should set at rest also the fear sometimes expressed outside the borders of the Soviet Union that Russian women sometimes marry guileless foreigners for the express purpose of going home with them and carrying on espionage for the benefit of the Kremlin. What actually happens to the Soviet girls who make the "mistake" of marrying foreigners and going to live in the United States, Britain, or France, according to Mr. Pavlov, is that they are reduced to a "slave status" by their husbands.

This kind of neurotic fear and distrust of foreigners, which is certainly not novel among Soviet officials, makes rational consideration of the serious problem posed by the natural desire of foreigners to take their Russian wives home with them an utter impossibility. As Mr. Bevin observed, nations cannot go to war over an issue of this kind. But the Russian neurosis is unlikely, for the time being at least, to yield to anything else. This is a genuinely pathetic situation for the unfortunate individuals involved. And it is also a tragic measure of the difficulty of doing any kind of business with a society so intent upon insulating itself.

"Hiss Vs. Chambers"

Your column headed "Hiss vs. Chambers" of August 27, moves me to protest these opinions, both as to editorializing and as expressions of an "independent newspaper."

My use of the word "column" is intentional, inasmuch as the article under discussion does not reflect the dignity of an editorial, or your supposed "independent policy," being biased, specious in reasoning and flagrantly belabored on behalf of Mr. Hiss.

The entire article was steeped with derisive conclusions anent the Committee on Un-American Activities, opening with the prejudicial phrase, "the great confrontation scene, etc." You pose the statement that since Mr. Chambers has been an acknowledged Communist, "he can scarcely be considered a person of uniform veracity." I take exception to the cynical implications of this stand on the grounds that any authentic reform, be it spiritual, corporeal or idealogical, takes a contemplative inner searching, that presupposes sincerity and new-found convictions. It takes no little courage to acknowledge to the world that one has been wrong and is amending one's character or habits, so why impugn Mr. Chambers' veracity, and tenderly defend and protect the "convenient" memory of Mr. Hiss and his denials?

Calloused Operators

I saw a man flipped into the air by a streetcar at 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. I saw him get to his feet, completely dazed, not knowing what to do or where to go. He sat down on the safety platform with his head in his hands, and then I saw the blood start to ooze from a huge laceration in his head.

My blood rose to the surface, too, and it's still boiling—for this reason—for a considerable time before I even realized that a man was being struck, I heard that streetcar's bell clanging, clanging, clanging. And that means only one thing to me—the operator of that car saw the man in sufficient time to slow down or stop for him, but all he did was clang his bell.

Granted that the pedestrian is oftentimes crossing at a time and place he shouldn't, I still maintain that the responsibility for that person's injury or death lies mostly with the operator of the vehicle when from his position he sees the possible interference.

Put up warning signs for pedestrians, yes! But work on the problem from the other end, too. Give us courtesy and good sense from the Capital Transit operators in return for the increased fares we are asked to pay.

Robotization

Now that the Un-American Activities Committee has elevated to high status the renegades of other countries and put a premium on apostates in our own, we may expect to see many more rats scurrying frantically for immunity coverage where they can squeal on honorable men with impunity.

As we watch this committee splashing its headlines and preempting the press from one end of the country to the other, we wonder why you don't extend your application of "humanizing robots" in the August 27 editorial, "Talking Dummies." Alas, we, the robotized, can no longer look with condescension on department store dummies and manikins. Still there's a spot of hope in the implied promise that some fine day the newspapers may see fit to "humanize the robots" they have created.

There remain, however, a few who have recognized the process of robotization and fought it. To these, reading between the lines has become a feat of skill. But there is another kind of reading which is too often overlooked: reading pictures in the papers, both of the accused and the accusers.

Reading the pictures published every day is an astonishing experience in other ways: here we see men shocked, startled and horrified at finding themselves suddenly at bay in a "strange country," the pack of their fellow-countrymen in full cry. On August 12, a picture of Henry Collins on the first page, depicts the surprise, disillusionment and fear of a child confronted suddenly by a hostile parent who threatens to kill him. Alas, America, these pictures tell an ominous story. Let those destroyers "who know the price of everything and the value of nothing" look to it!

"Unity In Europe"

I wish that everyone would read and ponder over one sentence in your August 27 editorial: "The way is federal union, a jointure of all free nations, no matter where situated." We've been hearing a lot of talk for a United States of Europe. But why should it be just of Europe? In the twentieth century, political ideals are certainly more logical criteria than geography.

What have we, of all countries, to lose by forming a federation with the other democracies? With our 140 million population, we could block any legislation that we as a nation opposed. We could still have for ourselves any legislation we wanted, simply by using our own legislative bodies as we do now.

On the other hand, we know that we will be the chief, if not necessarily the first, target of any large-scale Soviet aggression. Would it not be to our own self-interest to present a unified front instead of an allied one?

The Constitution-makers faced most of today's problems. The 13 States had separate currencies, debts of different sizes, poor communication with one another, local "patriotisms" and, worst of all, mutual petty irritations. But the Union was formed and made into a success. If it could be done in 1787, why can't it be done today?

B-36 Capability

A key statement made in an article on American air power in your issue of August 30 creates a misconception of its potentialities and should be properly restated.

Mr. Marshall Andrews, the author, reports that "until the great B-36, with its theoretical 10,000-mile range and its payload capacity of 36 tons is ready, the B-29 and B-50 must serve as the Nation's only very heavy bomber."

While the evaluation of the present role of the B-29 and its "souped-up" brother, the B-50, is correct, the operational attributes ascribed to the B-36 indicate a garbled interpretation of the available information on this subject.

The B-36 was designed to carry a payload of 10,000 pounds of bombs—just 5 tons—at its maximum range of 10,000 miles, a feat yet to be accomplished. It is also designed to carry a 36-ton payload at a greatly reduced range. Mr. Andrews has compounded a gross misstatement based on two half truths.

The achievements being recorded almost daily by modern aircraft are quite astonishing, and hardly need further embellishment, but to build up a public expectation in their performance beyond present capabilities with the inevitable resulting denouement, is to render a disservice to the cause of aviation in general and to that of the fledgling USAF in particular. Probe Moderator

As one man in the street, I have read much of the testimony on the Hiss-Chambers investigation and have witnessed some of it, and have come to the conclusion that the public might be justified in questioning the un-American activities and actions of not only the accused but also the committee. Innocent or guilty, the attitude of some members of the committee toward the accused has at times seemed a bit rough. What is needed is a moderator or umpire, to sit in on such hearings, to call to order not only the appropriateness of some of the questions but also the tone and spirit in which they are evidently pressed. Perhaps Congress might indicate some such moderator from recognized neutral groups.

Dr. Papanek's Answer

Dr. Papanek's communication in your issue of August 20 while adding no essential new facts to the case of Sychrava's freedom, tends to obscure rather than clarify certain aspects. May I, therefore, be allowed to return once more to a discussion which I considered already closed.

The first part of Dr. Papanek's lengthy communication needs no comment, as it serves mainly to introduce his own person. The middle parts, stripped of generalities and repetitions, can be boiled down to two controversial points requiring comment and rectification.

1. Dr. Papanek makes a great deal of the alleged illegality of the exit stamp. The Czechoslovak Ministry of the Interior in issuing the decree about the exit stamps (as an emergency measure for a certain time) acted fully within the realm of the law. It should be noted that exit stamps had been in use at previous occasions. I, myself, had them twice in my passport, in 1920 and in 1938. Today, again, no more exit stamps are required.

2. Dr. Papanek finds fault with my remarks about the amnesty of President Gottwald. I spoke of the amnesty in connection with the Sychrava case. I maintain that the amnesty would have set Dr. Sychrava free even if he had been sentenced to a prison term for illegal border crossing (which he was not). That was the only point to be made. As to the generosity of the amnesty, you have but to compare its terms with those of previous Czechoslovak amnesties granted by Mr. Gottwald's predecessors, T. G. Masaryk and Dr. Benes, to find out that I am not guilty of any exaggeration.

To connect the cases of General Janousek and Dr. Sychrava means to do grave harm to the latter. Janousek was not—as Dr. Papanek wants your readers to believe—sentenced to life imprisonment (with the sentence subsequently commuted to 18 years) just because "he tried to leave Czechoslovakia." In reality, his "attempt to leave the country" constituted nothing less than desertion as he was an officer on the active list. Moreover, he was caught while trying to cross the border with secret military documents which he planned to hand over to agents of a foreign power with whom he was in contact.

As to the last part of Dr. Papanek's communication which concerns mainly my person, nobody can expect me to descend to his level of personal abuse and gossip. I refrain even from confronting his words of today with quotations from letters in my possession—letters in which that same Papanek either thanks me for favors or compliments me profusely on my devotion to the cause of Czechoslovakia which he has deserted.

Calling Washington

California's Kiss

LOS ANGELES.—With the possible exception of New York, this is the State in which the Wallace Progressive Party had expected to poll the largest proportionate vote of any State in the Union. Dissenters, malcontents, radicals, wistful apostles of strange religions have been attracted by the brilliant sun and high coloring of the Pacific slope.

From this fringe the Wallace-Taylor ticket would draw a vote that might determine the outcome between the two major parties in California. That was the belief three months ago.

But there has been a steady decline in third-party strength, according to most observers. Even third-party officials have modified their claims, which are today somewhat less extravagant, ranging up to 1,300,000 votes out of a total that may reach four million.

This compares with an estimate of 250,000 to 320,000, which is the figure used today by professional estimators. A few impartial observers would put it as high as 500,000.

There are several obvious reasons why the Wallace strength should be declining here. The first and most obvious one is the pulling power of Gov. Earl Warren on the Republican ticket.

That pulling power promises to roll up a Republican vote that will blank both Democratic and Progressive tickets. The Democrats are disorganized by internal feuds and the sentiment for President Truman as a candidate is, to put it politely, lukewarm.

THE NEW chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, State Senator Oliver Carter, made it clear the other day that congressional candidates would not be required to support the national ticket actively. Only if they openly backed Henry Wallace and attacked Mr. Truman would they be disciplined.

This is especially significant since two Democratic candidates, Ellis Patterson and Ned Healy, both former Congressmen, have the nomination also of the Progressive Party under California's weird system of cross-filing. Presumably, if they stay neutral with regard to the national ticket, they will get as much help as those candidates who refused to file for the Progressive nomination.

In trying to build back, the Democrats have made a good start in selecting Carter, a younger man widely respected for his ability and integrity. He succeeds James Roosevelt, who alienated almost everyone in the party by his antics just before and during the Philadelphia convention.

The Democrats have recovered somewhat from the low point of three months ago. Fewer Democrats will stay at home on election day, and the defections to Wallace are believed to have fallen off.

THE RED scare loudly trumpeted in most of California's metropolitan newspapers is another reason for the decline of the third party. Reports of Communist domination and management in the Wallace party have had an effect.

Here, however, you get on doubtful ground. The Wallaceites profess to believe that a large silent protest vote will express itself in the privacy of the polling booth.

They say that people who are afraid to voice their opinions because of the current hysteria will not be afraid to put their X in the third-party column. They may be right, and the size of the Wallace vote could surprise the observers who have scaled it back to 300,000 or less.

Wallace will come back to this State in early October to spend six days in the vastness of mountain, desert and fantastically growing metropolitan areas. When he toured the State in the spring, he talked to large crowds, most of whom paid admission to hear him.

Mr. Truman and his running mate, Senator Alben W. Barkley, also will tour the bursting-at-the-seams empire of California. The State committee has been assured that, between them, Truman and Barkley will spend a total of six days seeing California's 25 electoral votes.

While it may be too early to judge, since the campaign is just beginning, it is hard to find any great evidence of enthusiasm for either side in this contest. Most people are too preoccupied with the struggle against inflationary prices and the newcomers are faced with the difficult task of finding a place to live.

The exception to this, of course, is Warren. Out here he is the home-town boy who has made good, another of the superlative local products to be heralded to the world.

Eliminating Prejudice

When our super patriots spout about "no discrimination" as between various segments of our population, they would be more convincing if the groups mentioned were not so conspicuously restricted.

If we are going to really eliminate prejudice, if we are not to be unreasonably discriminatory, our list should include each and all of the following: "No discrimination because of race, age, creed, color, nationality, economic ideology or previous condition of servitude."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Where Does The Money Go?

ONE Government row to be thankful for is the big row that seems to be in the making about defense investment. The question of how much defense one billion dollars ought to buy is becoming pretty urgent, as anyone can guess from the reports that 15 billion will not pay next year's bills for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

This question has already been directly raised by the Joint Research and Development Board report to Ferdinand Eberstadt, who is investigating the defense establishment for the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization. The JRDB, headed by the able Dr. Vannevar Bush, has the responsibility of coordinating all research and development projects for the three services. The sum of the report to Eberstadt was that the JRDB was solving the minor problems, but being defeated on the major problems, in this vital field. The importance of this is best brought out by illustrations.

First, the accuracy of aerial bombardment has assumed a crucial new significance that very few people have noticed. When thousands of tons of bombs were to be dropped, as in the last war, the very wide margin of bombing error that prevailed in the last war was not especially damaging. But the whole American strategic advantage now rests upon the new absolute weapons, and especially the atomic bomb.

Not thousands of tons, but only one or two bombs, are now to be dropped on each target. The greatest accuracy is essential. If war comes, it will be difficult to attain even the unsatisfactory last war-level of accuracy, in view of the absence of maps of the Soviet Union sufficiently dependable to be used in radar bombing. The JRDB believes that improvement in bombing accuracy should have the highest priority in research investment. But the Air Forces are making what is regarded as a rather limited effort along this line.

SECOND, the menace of the new German Type 21, long-range, high-speed, radar-proof submarine, has by now been repeatedly emphasized. According to naval intelligence, the Red fleet includes 250 of these craft, against which no satisfactory protection has yet been devised. So long as there is no protection against the Type 21 submarine, the Navy cannot do its job of holding control of the seas. Yet again, the concentration of effort on devising effective antisubmarine equipment and tactics is at present regarded as inadequate.

Third, the scientists and research experts of the JRDB have not yet been permitted to make a serious critique of the Navy's controversial 60,000-ton carrier. The proposed carrier and its huge flotilla of escorts, representing in all a total investment that may run as high as one billion dollars, must operate fairly close to the enemy's shores. Only here can the carrier carry out its mission, of launching air attacks on the enemy's inland centers. But in these waters, the carrier and its escorting flotilla will be especially vulnerable to submarine attack.

For these reasons, none but the Navy planners favor the carrier. On the other hand, the Newport meeting of the Joint Chiefs has now settled the bitter interservice dispute over roles and missions. There is a new atmosphere of amiability. And the other service chiefs are quite likely to approve the Navy's carrier, just to be pleasant about it.

CRITICALLY significant as all these matters are, moreover, they are not truly central. The heart of the whole problem of wise defense expenditure lies in the extraordinary disparity between the cost of defense in America and elsewhere. The daily tonnage of supplies consumed by an American combat division was estimated, in wartime, to be as much as five times greater than the tonnage required by a German division. The disparity is still greater when American and Russian divisions are compared.

Part of this difference is of course attributable to the fact that American divisions do not live off the country, and to the superior mobility insisted on by American planners. Yet even the most loyal American officers admit that in comparison to other defense establishments, ours is run on luxury lines. the JRDB has attempted to tackle this problem by establishing a special group to study logistics, but has again been frustrated.

All these facts at least establish that a problem exists. But the JRDB's role is simply that of the only body now capable of looking at the services through expert, though civilian, eyes. What is really wanted is strong executive leadership, by the President himself, to insure we get the best defense and the most defense for our money.

tails, and thus the negotiations were shifted to Berlin.

The directives which Seydoux brought, it was reported, provide for the use of a single Soviet-backed currency in Berlin under four-power supervision.

Two Currencies Circulating

At present both eastern and western currencies are circulating here. The Russians have outlawed the western mark in their sector.

The Russians launched their land blockade of the city more than two months ago on the technical ground that isolation measures were necessary to protect their zone against the western money.

Moscow dispatches said that if agreement is reached in the negotiations in Berlin the talks probably would be shifted back to Moscow. Authoritative sources in Moscow were quoted as saying there would then be a chance of restoring normal communications to Berlin, and arranging top-level discussions on the entire German question, perhaps during the United Nations General Assembly meeting in Paris.

Issuance of a communique on the negotiations, which had been expected in Moscow, appeared to have been sidetracked pending the outcome of the Berlin discussions.

Little Interest Shown in Democracy

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

(This is the fourth of a series by a Post reporter who recently returned from western Europe.)

Western Germany is still a moral as well as a physical ruin.

The rubble of its cities is not as ugly as the effect still left on the German mind by 15 years of dictatorship, war and defeat.

In spite of great material improvement, especially in the last six months, there has been no emergence—except in Berlin—of a sense of purpose and direction among the German people for whom we are temporarily responsible.

It would be pleasant to report an awakening public interest in democratic self-government at this time, when the western German politicians are meeting at Bonn at our request to write a new constitution. It would be encouraging to find German democracy taking root, and German nationalism giving way to a new spirit of partnership with the rest of Europe.

Living Is Primary Interest

But a visitor to Bizonia detects no such attitude. Public demonstrations in recent weeks, chiefly in Hesse and on the fringes of the Ruhr, have been protests against the high cost of living rather than in favor of any particular political solution of Germany's future.

The German under Western Allied occupation (outside Berlin) is intent only upon food, work and better living conditions for himself and his family.

He shows little interest in news of the outer world and its dissensions, although Berlin and to some extent Hamburg, with its international tradition, are exceptions. He looks upon Marshall aid and other relief from the United States as something to which he is as much entitled as anyone else in Europe.

He is not greatly interested in the decisions of the state governments which the Allies have set up in his name, except those that affect him directly—such as the new law recently passed by the Hesse Parliament, and vetoed by General Clay, giving labor an equal voice with that of management.

Situation in West Germany

If the western German thinks of politics at all, it is to wish that the occupying armies, with their paraphernalia of military government, would go home and leave him alone.

Americans would be deceiving themselves if they thought of this western Germany as a buffer against Soviet encroachment or as a dependable source of support for future American diplomatic or military policy.

It is true that the western German will not willingly embrace communism, although a self-governing west German state probably would not hesitate to make any deal with Russia that might seem to serve its immediate German interests.

In the Ruhr area, a comparative stronghold of Communist influence in the pre-Hitler days, the best estimate is that only 10 per cent of the miners are Communist by conviction, while another 20 or 25 per cent are fellow-travelers who use communism as a vehicle for their own discontents.

Future System a Riddle

But democracy on the western model does not appear to be making headway in the hearts and minds of the people, even though communism has little appeal as an alternative. The Germans have seen too much of Allied indecision and inconsistency in the past three years to have any great respect for the political systtem of their Western conquerors.

The baffling riddle in western Germany is to guess what kind of system will one day fill the void that Hitler left behind him.

In Cologne, once the center of relative moderation in the Catholic Rhineland, now gutted and smashed beyond description, I asked a respected Catholic cleric whether he saw any signs of a spiritual revival. He answered frankly that he saw none.

He said the church was losing ground in the Rhineland, not because communism was gaining but because the Rhinelander no longer cared about religion as he once did. Too many churches had been destroyed; it was too much of an effort to get to those that were still functioning; too much suffering had been caused by the air raids and their aftermath; too many Germans felt they no longer had much to live for.

Marshall Plan Discussed

He switched the conversation suddenly.

"Tell me," he asked, "is it true that you Americans have given the French 600 million dollars of Marshall Plan money that should have gone to us? After all, we have a bigger population, and we have a right to a bigger share."

I explained that, as far as I knew, the story wasn't true, and that American aid was not allotted on a basis of population or of "right." I asked him what the children of Cologne were being taught about the war, and about the ruins all around them.

The answer was that the church schools were teaching church history and European history up to 1870, but nothing more recent. There were no textbooks approved by the Allied authorities; therefore, he said, whatever the children learn about the Kaiser's Germany, and Hitler's, and the two world wars, they must learn at home.

No Jews In Cologne

Then, largely out of curiosity, I asked this man of God, who had never been cooperative with the Nazis, whether any of Cologne's Jews had survived the war, and how they were faring.

"No," he answered, "we have no Jews at all in Cologne—and that's a bad sign. If things were better here, they'd be back."

The attitude of detachment to Hitler and all his works is one of the German phenomena that a foreigner always finds it hard to understand. One well-known German industrialist in Duesseldorf, who holds a position of trust with the Allies although he was a member of the Nazi Party, talked to me of "the events that overtook us" in 1933 and later.

It should be said that the Germans in the western zones are working hard, oblivious by now to the ruins all around them, trying somehow to bring back a little decency and order into their lives.

Diet Is Tolerable

Thanks to American supplies and to the most intensive cultivation anywhere in Europe, the German people are getting a tolerable diet. Thanks to the currency reform, the black market has been driven to cover, and the problem now is no longer primarily one of finding the food but of paying for it.

Production of steel and coal has improved as much as any realistic official dared to hope, although not enough to warrant calling western Germany the "economic heartland" of Europe.

Enormous progress has been made in the past year in tidying up the rubble, in putting glass into gaping windows, in restoring some semblance of normality against the hideous background of the ruins.

Area a Moral Vacuum

But politically and morally western Germany is still a vacuum. The military occupation by the western Allies has failed to fill the emptiness except to provide temporary order and authority. Like most military occupations, this one is already producing diminishing returns.

If the aim of the military occupation was to provide a screen of troops against Soviet expansion, perhaps it serves its immediate purpose. If its aim was security against a German resurgence, a more efficient method might be American military support for a "western union" in Europe, including the permanent presence of B-29s on European bases.

But if the aim of Allied occupation was to transform the Germans by reeducation and example, then we might as well acknowledge that the task was beyond our power.

Burmese Fight Reds at Pegu

Rangoon, Burma, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Burmese government sent storm troop battalions into the Pegu area today in an effort to wipe out Communist rebels operating less than 50 miles from the Burmese capital.

A communique said the troops and rebels were fighting for possession of three villages in the southern Burma region. The bulletin claimed many insurgents were captured and some killed.

A government source predicted the important Irrawaddy River town of Prome, 150 miles northeast of Rangoon, would fall to government forces within the next 48 hours.

The communique said the situation in Burma was improving and that the Communist rebellion would be stamped out by early October.

An official statement announced the capture of U Ba Thuri, leader of an insurrection in the Karenni Hill tracts on Burma's northeast frontier adjoining Siam.

Public Holds Mixed Views Of Taft-Hartley Labor Act

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

"Do you think the Taft-Hartley law should be revised, repealed or left unchanged? If revised, should it be more strict with labor or less strict?"

Princeton, N. J., August 31.—One year after the passage of the Taft-Hartley law, American voters have widely divergent views about the measure.

Some want it made more strict in regulating labor unions but these are counterbalanced by voters who want the act made less strict. Nearly one-third—the largest single group—think it should be left unchanged. About one voter in six wants to see the measure repealed outright.

President Truman is expected to discuss the Taft-Hartley act in his Labor Day speech, his first major campaign address. The President vetoed the act a year ago in a bitingly critical message.

The controversy over the celebrated labor regulation measure sharply divides the country along occupational lines. Among labor union members and manual workers there is considerable sentiment for either repealing the act or making it less strict, whereas among professional men and women and among farmers there is comparatively little sentiment for liberalizing the act or doing away with it.

All voters who said they had heard about the act—three out of every four—were asked:

"Do you think the Taft-Hartley law should be revised, repealed or left unchanged? If revised, should it be more strict with labor or less strict?"

The national vote follows:

Law should be more strict	12%
Less strict	14
Repealed	16
No opinion	27

The Taft-Hartley issue splits opinion along political lines. Among Democratic voters there is much more sentiment for repeal or softening of the act than among Republican voters. This raises the question whether Governor Dewey can afford to advocate changes in the act during his campaign without offending the large body of Republican sentiment which is in favor of keeping the legislation as it is.

The division by political sentiment follows:

	Dems.	Reps.	Independents
More strict	9%	16%	11%
Less strict	16	9	19
Repeal	25	5	16

* * * * *

Union leaders in both the CIO and the AFL have declared that a major part of their political effort this year will be devoted to trying to defeat Congressmen and Senators who voted for passage of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Among the rank and file of labor union members the vote for outright repeal totals 38 per cent in today's poll, or roughly two out of every five. Another 21 per cent favor liberalizing the law. However this latter number is offset by 21 per cent who favor leaving the act unchanged.

The labor union vote follows:

Labor Union Members

More strict	2%
Less strict	21
No opinion	18

By occupation groups the vote is:

	Bus and prof.	Farm	Wh. coll.	Man. work
More strict	21%	15%	13%	6%
Less strict	14	6	18	13

Donations Legal, Says Hatch

Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) broke some bad news to Government workers yesterday.

He said they could contribute to political campaigns in amounts up to $5000 without bumping into his own Hatch Act.

His statement had a wistful ring but Hatch vigorously denied he is holding out the hat for the shy-of-funds Democratic National Committee.

"I'm not in charge of financial arrangements," said the chairman of the Democratic Speakers Bureau.

He said he just wanted to correct published statements that Federal workers are barred by his own law from making any contributions.

The contributions must be voluntary, he hastened to add. Solicitation by bureau chiefs, for example, might smack of "intimidation" which is barred by the act.

"There is no provision in the Hatch Act which prohibits Government workers, as such, from contributing voluntarily for campaign purposes," the Hatch statement said.

He said there is a provision on contributions that applies to individuals generally, adding:

"That provision prohibits any individual, which would include Government workers, from contributing more than $5000. Aside from this $5000 limitation the Hatch Act does not prohibit voluntary contributions by Government workers.

further discharged a ruling of last week ordering the Government to show just cause why Miss Gillars should not be released from jail.

Tompkins filed a motion Monday asking for these actions by Justice Keech after a conference with the court and United States Attorney George M. Fay.

Holzworth Protests

Holzworth yesterday sent a telegram to the court "to protest against the star chamber proceedings," charging "the entire proceeding was beneath the dignity of this honorable United States District Court."

At the morning hearing before U. S. Commissioner Lawrence, the alleged Axis Sally testified that she is in bad health and wanted medical attention "so that I may be able to conduct my defense in a composed state of mind."

After the formal hearing, when her request was granted, she asked an informal conference with the commissioner. She told him she was upset because one of the lawyers who sought to represent her, had told her she would be "railroaded" on the treason charge.

Defendant Sobs

Sobbing as she asked for a word with the commissioner, she complained that she had been "kidnaped and brought to America" after being held for a year and a half without arrest.

Commissioner Lawrence said that he had issued a warrant for her arrest, which was served when she stepped off an airplane here August 21. The commissioner added, "You will not be railroaded, I can assure you. We have in America a system of justice that does not permit anyone to be railroaded."

He asked her if she had engaged an attorney, and Miss Gillars said, "No, but I seem to have a couple hanging around."

Commissioner Lawrence then assured her she would get a lawyer, whereupon John M. Kelley, jr., special assistant to the Attorney General, broke in to say:

"I also want to assure you that you will have an attorney of your own choice, and if you are unable financially or otherwise to procure one, you will be offered one by the Department of Justice or by the commissioner. You will be able to be represented by a thoroughly competent and reliable attorney."

Accompanied by Half-Sister

Kelley said interviewing of witnesses, many of them former prisoners of war who had personal contact with Miss Gillars in German prison camps, would continue until about September 8.

Miss Gillars was taken from District Court building, where she had been kept in a lock-up during the afternoon, at about 6:30 p. m. Accompanying her then, as well as at the morning hearing, was her half-sister, Mrs. Edna Mae Herrick.

Asked by reporters if Miss Gillars' ailment is serious, Mrs. Herrick, said, "I don't have anything to say."

It was understood that Miss Gillars had spent part of the afternoon conferring with advisors on an attorney to represent her in the trial.

Zhdanov Dies; Soviet Leader

were so close to the Soviet throne. Although the West looked upon the former as an evil influence and tended to dred his possible succession to Stalin, neither he nor Molotov has followed a policy of cooperation with the West for the past two years.

Zhdanov was the youngest member of the 14-man Politburo. Students of Soviet affairs felt his death leaves a serious gap in that top policy body, which could not be "adjusted" for several months.

Recognized as Russia's leading

In one of his last public declarations, on October 22, Zhdanov appealed to Communists and their sympathizers throughout the world to rally against what he termed a United States attempt to achieve "world domination."

He promised that Russia would take the lead in attempting to wreck the Marshall Plan and preventing the United States from making a forty-ninth State" of Europe.

In announcing his death, Radio Moscow broadcast a report from the Central Committee of the Communist Party and the USSR Council of Ministers:

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the USSR Council of Ministers with great sorrow inform the party and all working people of the Soviet Union that on August 31, at 3:55 p. m., Moscow time, after a serious illness, died Col. Gen. Andrei Alexandrovich Zhdanov, outstanding leader of our party and of the Soviet state, member of the political bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU), a secretary of the Central Committee of the CPSU, a deputy of the USSR Supreme Soviet.

"The death of Comrade Andrei Alexandrovich Zhdanov, a faithful son of the party of Lenin and Stalin who devoted all his life to serving the great cause of communism, is a very great loss for the party and the whole Soviet people.

"In the person of Comrade Zhdanov, the party lost an outstanding Marxist theoretician, a very gifted propagandist of the great ideas of Lenin and Stalin, one of the most prominent constructors of the party and the Soviet state.

"A faithful pupil and comrade-in-arms of the great Stalin, Comrade Zhdanov by his vigorous activity for the wellbeing of the Soviet motherland and by his supreme devotion to the cause of the party of Lenin and Stalin, won the warm love of the party and the whole working people of our country."

Ex-GIs Claim Witness Fees Too Low to Live Here

A group of former GIs carried to Capitol Hill yesterday their complaint that they were better off financially as German war prisoners than as witnesses in the Axis Sally treason case.

Specifically, they complained, they can't live in Washington on the $5 a day allowed by the Justice Department for food and board for witnesses.

Three of them who said they spoke for approximately 20 former war prisoners subpenaed as witnesses in the grand jury investigation now in progress asked Representative Andrews (D., Ala.) to do something about it.

They were W. R. Chestnut, Phoenix City, Ala.; Alan Tappenden, Marquette, Mich., and Michael Evanick, New York City.

Evanick estimated that it is costing him about $20 a day to be a witness. Not only is he losing his daily pay from his regular job, he told newsmen, but he is digging into his own resources, to meet Washington living expenses not covered by the $5 allowance, and doing our own laundry trying to make ends meet, but it won't work," he said.

The three said they have been in Washington since last Thursday and still haven't been called as witnesses.

"At this rate we'll all be broke before long," Evanick commented. "We were better off financially while we were prisoners, since our Army pay kept on."

A District of Columbia court official said that an out-of-town witness receives a $2 a day witness fee, $3 a day for food and lodging, plus his carfare here and back.

The scale for witnesses is set by law, he pointed out.

Ickes Among 8 Accused in Canal Zone UPWA Case

Balboa, Canal Zone, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Newspaper columnist and former Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes was among eight men charged today by Canal Zone District Attorney Daniel E. [illegible]rath with "conspiring to obstruct justice."

Also accused were President Abram Flaxer of the United Public Workers of America, and Max Brodsky, regional director of the UPWA.

In a complaint filed in the Balboa Magistrates Court, McGrath alleged that the men, through newspaper columns, over the radio and through the official UPWA publication had sought to convince the public that conviction of Joseph Sachs, international UPWA representative, for criminal libel against McGrath was "an infringement of the sovereignty of the Republic of Panama."

Under Canal Zone regulations, each of the eight defendants is liable to a fine of $1000 and a year's imprisonment if found guilty.

A Chilling Film X-Rays a Village

By Richard L. Coe

USUALLY I DON'T drag the ads of movies into reviews, but those sexy, lurid come-ons for the Little's new double bill do neither picture justice. I suspect they'll scare away the very people who will most enjoy them, attract just the folk who won't be the least amused.

"The Raven" and "A Lover's Return" are two French films new to Washington; the first is a classic of the macabre, the second a minor draught of dry champagne. The sensational tone of the newspaper ads is a new pitch for the long-respected Little and I, for one, regret it.

For "The Raven" is a masterpiece, though I allow half of you won't care for it. It depicts the effect of poison-pen letters on a small village. It spares no one, children included, and examines its people with a cold, unemotional approach that is peculiarly fascinating. Its exact, precise, delicate bitterness is unbelievably chilling.

The story in back of "The Raven" is chilling, too. The French made it during the German occupation, basing it on the 1920 poison-pen trials at Tulle (not on the Poe poem). So brilliantly did it catch the bitter side of the petite bourgeoisie, that the Nazis grabbed it for Germany, where it was released as "A Small French Village," presumably showing the Germans how craven the French villagers all were—much in the manner "The Grapes of Wrath" has been used in police states against the United States. It was not until last year that the Fourth Republic permitted "The Raven" to be shown either at home or abroad.

"THE RAVEN," Westport International Films, with the special permission of the French government, presents "Le Corbeau," written by Louis Chavance; directed by Henri-Georges Clouzot.

THE CAST

Pierre Fresnay Starred

Such caution is understandable, for one tendency the camera arouses is generalization. Because one is gripped by "The Raven" and its people doesn't mean one has contempt for mankind; the picture is exceptional because its handling is exactly in tune with its theme. It's absorbing, though it contributes nothing.

The story concerns the effect of numerous anonymous letters on a small town. These are at first directed against a young doctor. Finally all the leading citizens' hidden vices are public knowledge. Before the skein is unraveled, there have been riots, a suicide and a murder. Even an innocent-seeming schoolgirl is depicted with a cold horror that will remind some of you of "The Innocent Voyage" (another title you may know the Richard Hughes novel under is "High Wind in Jamaica").

Apart from the precise acting of a splendid cast headed by Pierre Fresnay, the film boasts fine, sparse English subtitles.

The Little's other film, "A Lover's Return," is something else again, a dry, sophisticated adventure in which a lover returns, 20 years later, to Lyons where his youthful romance had been broken up by the girl's family to enable her to marry money. Louis Jouvet plays this fellow, now a successful ballet master who manages to get into his hands the lives of all those who jolted him 20 years earlier.

The Sauve Jouvet

He lures his old sweetheart to run away with him and breaks the son of his chief adversary by baiting him with a wise but beautiful ballerina. Then, having made clear to the lot of them that he might have had the best of them, he washes his hands of them, leaves them as he rediscovered them, shaken but still safe.

The story is adroitly told, cool, unemotional, and Jouvet's strikingly restrained performance is precisely in that key. There are some on-stage dancing sequences for both atmosphere and plot by the Monte Carlo Ballet, and you'll admire Ludmila Tcherina as the knowing girl who becomes the youngster's first love.

"A Lover's Return" is as sauve at "The Raven" is macabre.

U. S. Red Cross Chief Given Swedish Medal

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 31 (AP). King Gustaf V has awarded Basil O'Connor, president of the American Red Cross, the Royal Medal of Merit of the Swedish Red Cross in gold.

The medal is given rarely, and O'Connor is the only American to receive it.

Count Folke Bernadotte today presented the medal to O'Connor at a ceremony in the Swedish Parliament building, where O'Connor presided at an International Red Cross meeting.

D. C. Clearings Up 13% to New August Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Heat and humidity failed to slow Washington's check-writing in August.

The month's total of $290,397,895 was a new August record and was 13 per cent larger than in the same 1947 period, according to George H. Bright, manager of the Washington Clearing House Association.

Check clearings, considered a reliable barometer, reflected the high level of local business activity. Dollar volume of retail sales is at an all-time peak, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Home building, business construction and remodeling also are at boom levels. Government and private payrolls here remain high, while gross revenues of the four utilities also are at peak levels.

For the first eight months this year, Washington clearings set a new record of $2,387,399,762 as compared with $2,187,424,443 in the corresponding period last year.

Monthly check transactions compared as follows:

	1948	1947
January	$309,650,588	$282,970,821
February	251,136,377	239,049,317
March	308,815,679	266,648,633
April	322,440,133	286,611,486
May	282,060,251	270,678,221
June	325,501,821	285,678,922
July	306,997,014	294,862,476
August	290,397,895	256,924,526

ISRAEL ISSUE: Sparking a 10-million-dollar bond sale in this country to develop the state of Israel is Edmund I. Kaufmann of Washington, president of Kay Jewelry Stores. Kaufmann got the sale off to a fast start yesterday by personally underwriting $250,000 of the bonds. He is board chairman of American-Palestine Trading Corp. which is guaranteeing the 10-year sinking fund debentures carrying 3 per cent interest. Kaufmann expressed belief that "over the years Israel and its various economic activities will not only serve to spearhead the economic development of the whole Middle East but will offer excellent investment channels for American investors."

Kaufmann

DIVIDENDS: Directors of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., yesterday declared regular quarterly dividends as follows: 37½ cents a share on common stock; 34⅜ cents on 5½ per cent convertible preferred stock; 28⅛ cents on 4½ per cent convertible preferred stock. All dividends are payable September 30 to stock of record September 15.

HEADS DIVISION: W. B. Benson has been appointed assistant vice president of Universal C. I. T. Credit Corp. and will head the company's newly opened Washington division office in the Ring Building. He will direct branches in Washington, Wilmington, Del., and five in Maryland. Benson, formerly special district manager here, succeeds W. H. Thomas as district manager. Thomas for reasons of health will take a less active part in affairs of the company.

Benson

RETIREMENT PLAN: John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., yesterday announced the food chain had adopted a retirement plan for its more than 110,000 employes. About 2850 in the Washington-Baltimore unit will be affected. Entire cost of the pension plan will be borne by the company.

ODD LOTS: Bache & Co. will open a branch today in Wheeling, W. Va., and Orvis Bros. & Co. has opened one in New Orleans. Both have branches also in Washington . . . New York Central Railroad asked ICC authority to issue $13,800,000 in equipment trust certificates . . . ICC has authorized Chesapeake & Ohio Railway to issue $5,500,000 of equipment trust certificates . . . Chevrolet division of General Motors yesterday produced its 21 millionth vehicle since 1912 . . . Tel-O-Tube Corp. of America is in full production of a new type, large screen television viewing tube made partly of metal . . . Philco Corp. has notified distributors it plans to increase prices on radios and television sets on or about September 8 . . . Du Pont Co. today will open a new plastic materials manufacturing plant on the Ohio River near Parkersburg, W. Va.

BRANCH TO OPEN: The Seat Pleasant Bank in nearby Maryland will open a branch today at 4705 Marlboro pike, Vice President and Cashier Leo J. Naughton announced. The office, to be known as the Coral Hills branch, will be managed by L. Elwood White, assistant cashier. Established in 1933, the Seat Pleasant Bank now has assets in excess of 2½ million dollars. The new branch is located in the recently completed Coral Hills shopping center.

EARNINGS: Glidden Co. reported net income of $5,630,161 for nine months ended July 31, equal to $3.02 a common share, compared with $6,088,762 or $3.25 a share in same 1947 period. Other earnings statements:

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THERE IS ANOTHER pro football league despite the pretense of the NFL that the pro football business is its own tight monopoly. The All-America Conference, if not here to stay, is at least here for a third year, and one National Football League club owner is wearying of the blinkers that are supposed to shut off view of any competition.

POVICH

Alexis Thompson of the Philadelphia Eagles wants done with the nonsense of battling the AAC and is demanding peace in the pro football war that has sent player salaries and bonuses skyrocketing. Mr. Thompson's is a lone thin voice among his NFL colleagues, but he believes he is on solid ground. His Eagles won the Eastern championship last season, got into the playoff against the Chicago Cardinals, and ended up with a $50,000 deficit on the year's operation.

The Eagles were paying tackles $15,000 a year as a result of the competitive bidding of the even richer AAC. He wants to extend recognition to the AAC and eliminate the frenzied bidding for players through a common draft list that would be respected by the two leagues. The pro football business is getting too costly, he pleads. And there is no sign yet that the cold stare of the NFL will be driving the All-America out of business.

IN FACT, THE ALL-AMERICA appears at this time to be thriving with new vigor. Nine exhibition games have been played by AAC clubs thus far this season, and they have drawn an average of 23,235 customers despite such locales as Freeport, Long Island; Akron, Toledo and Portland, Oreg. When the Los Angeles Dons played the Forty-Niners at Pasadena, the crowd count was a whopping 58,207.

The AAC's two supposedly weak spots, Buffalo and Baltimore, are going to flourish, too, there are indications. Buffalo was one of the better teams last year and a title threat this season, with George Ratterman, the forward passer from Notre Dame, now mayoralty timber in that town. There is a segment of football opinion that always did rate Ratterman a better passer than Johnny Lujack, the man he understudied at South Bend.

Baltimore, though, has come up with the preseason sensation of pro football in a young man who is fabulous if only for the fact that he is known only as Y. A. Tittle, a football player without a nickname. Mr. Tittle is the rookie quarterback from Louisiana State who is keeping former All-American Charlie O'Rourke tethered to the Colts' bench to the high satisfaction of Coach Cecil Isbell.

YOUNG MR. TITTLE was positively immense in his first two exhibition games for the Colts. Isbell saw him first in the 27-21 defeat by Los Angeles when he almost single-handedly took the Colts to victory, and just the other day he got another jubilant eyeful of Tittle. That was when the Louisiana State lad threw a pair of touchdown passes in the Colts' amazing upset of the Champion Cleveland Browns.

Beating the Browns, even in an exhibition game, was the best thing that could have happened for the Colts' season ticket sales, and the cashiers in Baltimore have been busy ever since disbursing the seats to eager customers. The New York Yankees, who are supposed to be the hottest club in the Eastern Division, never have beaten the Browns in five attempts in the last two years.

The All-America Conference, after scoping up most of the headline college stars before the 1947 season, was outdone by the NFL this year. The older league snared Lujack and Layne and Conerly and Evans and Gilmer and most of the top guys of 1948 college ranks, but the All-America, after its raids of the season before, was not in such desperate need of big names.

THE AAC CLUBS can put on a show, though, wherever they are playing. The lowly Brooklyn Club is unveiling Michigan's Bob Chappius, the most-sought-after player with the exception of Lujack, and the Chicago Rockets are being quarterbacked by Angelo Bertelli. At Brooklyn, Chappius will be throwing to Hank Foldberg, Army's celebrated end, and backing up the Dodgers' line will be Notre Dame's former center, George Strohmeyer.

The Browns, of course, are an immense attraction with Otto Graham at quarterback and their great colored fullback, Marion Motley. The Frisco Forty-Niners with Frankie Albert and Norman Standlee boast a pair of big-game guys who are good boxoffice, and the Los Angeles Dons with John Kimbrough are billed as the biggest team in either league.

Baltimore opens its league season at home on Sunday against the New York Yankees and a crowd of 50,000 is in prospect, with Tittle and the new Colts firing the imagination of the natives. And the Colts couldn't be booking a better attraction than the Yankees. Spec Sanders and Buddy Young are an act that always packs 'em in.

Hippenstiel, Johnsen Win

Capt. Robin Hippenstiel and Dr. Davey Johnsen outlasted Eddie Miller and Charlie Channing, 6-2, 7-5, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2, yesterday at Columbia Country Club and won the Middle Atlantic doubles tennis championship.

Strong service and driving net play decided the match in favor of Hippenstiel and Johnsen. The first turning point in the match came in the second set when Miller and Channing lead, 5-3. However, Hippenstiel and Johnsen rallied to win four straight points.

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau led the Cleveland Indians to a 6 to 1 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics tonight with a single, a double and a triple which drove in two runs.

Relief Pitcher Bob Lemon retired three A's in succession without allowing a run after Philadelphia loaded the bases in the ninth with none out.

Lemon saved the game for Rookie Southpaw Gene Bearden who was lifted by Boudreau after walking the first two men to face him in the ninth inning. Lemon issued a third successive pass to Pete Suder but then fanned Pinch Hitter Carl Scheib, got Eddie Joost on a short outfield fly and Barney McCosky on a foul pop fly to end the game.

Boston's Parnell Stops Tigers, 8-4

Boston, Aug. 31 (AP).—Lefty Mel Parnell maintained his perfect record against the Detroit Tigers by holding them to eight hits as his Boston Red Sox protected their slim American League lead with an 8-4 victory tonight before a packed 33,310 crowd.

It was Parnell's fourth successive decision over the Tigers in two seasons, a feat that boosted his sophomore record to the 11-6 mark.

Nats Pound Chisox, Win For Hudson, 7-1

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Before the disbelieving eyes of 3449 observers, the Nats hit two home runs in one game last night, taking a 7-1 decision.

The victims were the Chicago White Sox against whom Sid Hudson finally broke the spell of a 10-week pitching slump with a 4-hit performance.

To help Hudson register his fourth triumph and his first since June 20 when he also whipped the Sox, Eddie Stewart chipped in his fourth homer and Al Evans walloped his second round tripper of the campaign.

Both were inside-the-park homers and highlighted a 14-hit attack against three Chisox hurlers. Stewart's came in the first inning with two on and at the expense of Starter and Loser Ike Pearson. Evans delivered his in the eighth against Glenn Moulder.

A Single Walk

Even against an eighth-place team, Hudson was rather splendid last night, his control which had cost him many of his 13 defeats, was almost perfect. He walked only one.

He lost his shutout in the seventh inning when Ralph Hodgins' double scored Dave Philley, who had singled.

Stewart's homer was hit to left center. It was a good triple, but when Philley juggled the ball momentarily as Stewart headed for home, Coach Sammy West gave the Nat center fielder the green light and he beat the throw to the plate easily.

Scores Handily

Evans was a solidly hit ball which finally came to rest against the fence in deep center. He made it home without even sliding.

Johnny Sullivan, replacing Al Kozar at second, had a big night at the plate, too, with three singles, everybody except Junior Wooten, who relieved Mickey Vernon at first base in the seventh, got at least one hit.

Vernon drove in two runs with a double. Hudson also clipped a double and scored a run when Gil Coan whacked out one of his two singles.

IN SHORT—Coan saved Hudson a run with a perfect throw to the plate in the second inning to cut down Wright who tried to score from third on Philley's fly . . . Kozar was out with a cold, and Sullivan played second well . . . Vernon was hit on the right knee by a smash off Lupien's bat and retired in the seventh inning . . . for tonight's final, the Sox send Chic Pieretti, who's bad elbow is acting up again, against Walt Masterson . . . Pieretti will be trying for his ninth and Masterson his eighth.

Maury Nee Loses

Brownell Bags Eagle, Beats New Yorker, 2-1, in Amateur

Memphis, Aug. 31 (AP).—Bobby Brownell of Washington, D. C., won his second match in the national amateur golf championship today by defeating Richard Mayer, New York, 2 and 1.

Brownell scored an eagle and played the same steady brand of golf that enabled hi mto win his first-round match Monday from Ronald Williams, Detroit, 5 and 3.

Maury Nee of Washington, was eliminated by Louis Cass of Hollywood, 5 and 3. Nee drew a bye yesterday.

In Mayer, Brownell faced the 1947 New York amateur champion and knew from the start that he would have to play his best golf in order to win.

Brownell set about doing this by shooting even par for a 2-up lead through the first eight holes. Mayer birdied the 319-yard ninth to get one of those holes back and evened the match on the tenth when Brownell went over par on a hole for the first time in this tournament.

Brownell's eagle came on the 465-yard eleventh. He hit two tremendous wood shots in a strong wind, was on the green 18 feet from the cup and holed the putt for a 3.

Brownell's victory came on the seventeenth hole with a birdie 3. His medal for the distance played was 1 under par.

Brownell's victory sends him against Clarke Hardwicke, Los Angeles, in the third round Wednesday morning.

King pins of amateur golf fell like tenpins as a wave of upsets rocked the second round.

Three former champions—Dick Chapman, Ted Bishop and Chick Evans—and onetime British titleholder Robert J. Sweeney, jr., were hustled to the sidelines as heat and pressure mounted on the seared Memphis Country Club Course.

The tourney's hotshot tandem—Defending Champion Robert (Skee) Riegel of Monterey Park,

Pirates Score 3 in Seventh To Beat Out Giants, 5 to 4

Pittsburgh, Aug. 31 (AP).—The onrushing Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to edge the New York Giants 5 to 4 tonight to move within two games of first place. The win was the fourth straight for the Pirates while the Giants dropped their seventh in a row.

A crowd of 30,386 set a new home attendance record of 1,291,558 thus far this season.

All of the Pirate runs in the seventh were unearned, the Giants chipping in with two errors.

Johnny Hopp, pinch-hitting for Ed Bockman, opened the inning with a single. That was all for Sheldon Jones. Ray Poat was greeted by a double by Eddie Fitzgerald and when Bob Thomson fumbled the ball, Hopp raced home.

Max West batted for Elmer Riddle and was safe when Buddy Kerr dropped his pop fly back of second. Stan Rojek forced Fitzgerald at third and Danny Murtaugh bounced out but a walk to Dixie Walker loaded the bases. Ralph Kiner then shot a single to center, scoring Basgall and Rojek with the tying and winning runs.

The Pirates have now won 19 of their last 27 games.

Charles Signs For Garden Bout Nov. 12

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Gabe Menendez is a matchmaker with a dream and he's clinging to it despite yesterday's announcement that Heavyweights Ezzard Charles and Joe Baksi have signed for a Madison Squar Garden bount November 12.

Menendez already has Charles' services here September 13 when the Cincinnati battler is scheduled to climb into the ring against Jimmy Bivins at Griffith Stadium.

If the NBA comes through with title sanction, Menedez hopes to be able to put on a championship bout early in October at Griffith Stadium between the Charles-Bivins and Walcott-Lesnevich winners.

Menendez Unconcerned

Informed yesterday of the Charles-Baksi arrangement, Menendez professed to be unconcerned and wouldn't admit that the bout would hurt his chances of making the big fight.

"As long as Charles is going to fight in November, I'm not worried," Menendez explained. "What's going to prevent him from fighting here in September and then in October, if we can get NBA backing for a heavyweight championship bout?"

However, others figured that Charles, handlers made the fight to keep in the good graces of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club which is promoting it.

Ezzard Bet for Loss

There were some, though, who know something about the oft mysterious working in pugilistic circles, who agreed with Menendez that Charles' November booking might not mean a thing.

They reason that if Menendez manages to pull off his long shot and Charles emerges as NBA-recognized heavyweight champion it's unlikely that Ezzard would go through with the New York bout.

Burgess Team Upset in Tennis

Coolidge Coach Ignores Football Practice, 11 Other Highs Start

Conn Waits For Formal Board Order

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Football Coach Gil Conn of Coolidge High School said yesterday that he will not call his team to practice before opening of school unless he's "formally" ordered to do so by the Board of Education.

Coaches of the other 11 public highs meanwhile called their squads today for their first drills in conformity with a virtual directive of the board's personnel committee.

In special session Monday, the committee said that coaching after school hours is part of a physical education instructor's normal teaching load. The interpretation was expected to be confirmed today by a board poll.

Threatened to Quit

The board moved when 42 coaches of all intersoholastic sports threatened not to work except during the normal school hours unless they are paid for overtime. The committee said the coaches will be compensated by an adjustment in the working hours.

Conn said, "I have committed myself to bricklaying work until school starts September 23. I made my plans when Superintendent of Schools Dr. Hobart M. Corning told Congress last year that coaching work is 'voluntary.'

"I planned not to volunteer to coach until school starts.

"Now, without notice to me, the board is in the process of reversing Dr. Corning, and making it arbitrary for me to coach," said Conn.

Wants Notification

"This bricklaying work means a lot to me and my family. We need the money."

The former George Washington University gridder cotninued, "Besides, all the personnel committee has done so far is make a recommendation. There's the technicality of board approval. And finally, they must notify me personally, and not through the newspapers.

"All I know about these school board meetings is what I've read in the papers."

Hardy Pearce, director of public high athletics, said, "I have nothing to do with this whole business. I'm standing by. I can't order a substitute for Mr. Conn."

Pearce said that doctors would be at Woodrow Wilson today to give physical examinations to Wilson's candidates. Coolidge's grid candidates are scheduled for their checkups Thursday. He said he didn't contemplate changing his plans.

Other schools opening practice today are St. John's and Bullis.

They join Gonzaga, George Washington of Alexandria, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Washington-Lee of Arlington, Montgomery-Blair and Devitt Prep, which got a head-start last week. The 22-man Devitt squad, for the first time, has its own special camp at Point Maryland, on the Potomac, 50 miles south of Washington.

The smaaller parochial schools, Landon, Priory, Sidwell Friends and St. Albans play their first games late, so they won't begin practice for at least a week.

Three new head football coaches have been named, Bill Edmondson at Fairfax, Bill Kellen at Devitt and Lee McLaughlin at Episcopal of Alexandria. Another will be named to succeed Jim Graham, who resigned at Landon to take a job in Indiana.

St. John's has a new line coach in Tom Abergini, former Steelers player. Gonzaga has added Joseph Monoghan as line coach. Frank August has been appointed to the public highs' coaching department but hasn't been assigned to a school yet. And Walter Zuke succeeded Charlie Guy as athletic director of Bullis.

Mrs. Glick Ousted, 3-2

San Francisco, Aug. 31 (AP).—Alice Bauer, 20-year-old Long Beach girl, chalked up a first-round upset in the Women's Western Amateur golf championship today when she defeated Mrs. Jackie Pung, Honolulu, 1 up. The result sidelined the tournament co-medalist.

Trans-Mississippi Champion Polly Riley of Fort Worth defeated Mrs. Kermit Pearson, San Mateo, 1 up and Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, ousted the Maryland titlist, Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore 3 and 2.

Another reversal saw Betty Mackinnon of Texarkana, Ark., defeat Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, 4 and 3.

The upset wave also swept the Texas title winner, Bettye Mims White of Dallas, into discard. She lost to Pat McPhee of San Mateo, 1 up on the nineteenth.

Gals Head Turner Program Tonight

The ladies, bless 'em, take charge of wrestling activities tonight at Turner's Arena, featuring a pair of matches that might develop a capable opponent for Champion Mildred Burke.

Nell Steward and Lil Ellison tangle in the opening feature, followed by Dot Dodson against Ada Ash.

85 Tee-Off Today in Junior Golf Championships

In Sandlot Series

Firemen Win, 4-2, Over Plumbers

Helped by three errors, District Fire Department defeated Merchandising Plumbers, 4-2, yesterday on the South Ellipse and advanced to the final round of the city sandlot championship series.

The Plumbers meet Jet Motor Sales today at 4:30 p. m. on the South Ellipse. If unbeaten Jet wins, it carts off the title. The once-defeated Plumbers must whip Jet twice to take the crown.

Two of the Plumbers' damaging miscues came at the beginning of the third inning with Pitcher Ben Harrell and Bill Vaughan reaching base. Barney Wallerstein drove them both in with a single to center. In the seventh, singles by George Larrick, Hal Krug and Bill Moore, combined with a stolen base and an error, accounted for the two winning runs.

No-Hitter for Kramer

Fred Kramer hurled a perfect no hit no run game to lead Jack's Cafe to a 5-0 shutout over Hedin Construction Co. in the city-wide D. C. Recreation softball playoffs yesterday at Langdon Park field.

Worsham Defending Champion

The Second Annual District of Columbia junior open golf championship begins this morning at the Georgetown Prep School.

Eighty-five youngsters, from 9 to 21 years old will start medal play for positions on the three match play flights.

Bubby Worsham, who won the first junior open last year on the same course, will be on hand to defend his title.

Two Wolfe boys, Eugene Maryland junior open champ, and Billy, the 14-year-old schoolboy champ, are two more entries who are likely to finish far up in the running.

Panama Champ Entered

An interesting newcomer to Washington junior golf is also entered. Kay Fletcher, 13, whose father was recently appointed engineer at Soldiers Home, is the junior champion of Panama.

Frank Emmett, godfather of junior golf in the District, has arranged a feature match for this afternoon between two of the contestants. Last May, Stanley Mouser and Willie Beach, finished with the winning score of 74 in The Washington Post Schoolboy Tourna-

As yet they haven't had the opportunity to play it off. So the two will play their qualifying rounds together this afternoon, and and low man will carry off a handsome 10-inch trophy, the spoils of last May's tournament.

301 Nails Fail to Flatten Tire with New General Puncture-Sealing Tube

"Go ahead and pull them out," says Joe Beckett, manager of General's Field Engineering Service, to State Highway Patrolman Stanley Adomaitis. Future developments proved that this tire, with 301 nails in it, still had not lost a pound of air after 30 days. This means the end of tire changing due to punctures for motorists with the new General Puncture-Sealing tube. These amazing new tubes are now on sale at Croker General Tire Company, 14th and Que Street Northwest, telephone DUpont 2500.

Brownell Gains Third Round, Nee Loses in Amateur Golf

Calif., and Toledo's Frank Stranahan, holder of the British and Canadian crowns—survived the upheavals although both were carried to the final hole.

Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., winner in 1939 and 1941, and Wee Willie Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y., who captured the United States crown in 1938 and the British title in 1947, also came through to present a still solid front for ambitious youngsters striving to crack the "old guard."

These veterans of the fairways, of whom only Stranahan is below 30 years of age, led the way into tomorrow's stepped-up program which will see the field reduced to 16 by two 18-hole rounds.

Riegel faces the sternest challenge yet to his reign. He will meet Gene Dahlbender, Atlanta's long knocking Southern champion, in the morning. If successful, he may catch Johnny Dawson of Hollywood, Calif., in the afternoon.

Dawson, runner up to Riegel last year at Del Monte, Calif., entered the third round with a 2 and 1 victory over George Trainor of Pittsford, N. Y.

Riegel, firing a 72 over the 6617-yard, par layout, eliminated Robert E. Clark of Colorado, one up. He got off to a three-hole lead through six holes but had to call upon all his stroking wizardry to stand off the Westerner's stout rally.

Stranahan prevailed, one up also, over Charles B. Dudley, 1947 North-South champion of Greenville, S. C.

Chapman, the 1940 winner from Pinehurst, N. C., anad Bishop, the 1946 titlist from Islington, Mass., were shown the gate by a couple of youngsters playing in their first national.

Chapman was beaten by Richard L. (Bubba) Smart of Pine Bluff, Ark., 4 and 3. The 24-year-old Smart, who graduated from the University of Arkansas last spring, was one under par for the 15 holes.

Bishop was ousted by Don Spomer of Lincoln, Nebr., one up. Spomer, a 20-year-old University of Nebraska junior, won the last three holes of the match.

Boys, Junior Tennis Starts

The District Lawn Tennis Association boys and girls tournament opens this morning at the Congressional Golf and Country Club with 28 matches in the boys' singles and junior singles division.

Most of the better younger players in the District are entered. Tim Coss, seeded first in the boys division, recently won the New York City championship.

Entries for the girls events are being held open until noon tomorrow.

Boys' Seedings—First, Tim Cross; second, Don Thompson; third, Charles Rieger; fourth, Tom Bradford.

Boys' Pairings for Today:

6:30—John Addison vs. Joseph Clancy.

Janney Denies Racing Stories

Stuart S. Janney, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, last night vehemently denied published reports that he urged the abolition of the State's five half-mile tracks.

Janney told The Washington Post that the stories were "absurd." Said Janney, "Our job is to supervise racing, the Legislature decides where it shall be held."

The chairman who succeeded George Mahoney, center of more than his share of stormy controversies, insisted he was badly misquoted.

"The only thing I recall saying was that some of the horses on the half-milers were too old or in too poor condition to race and that I thought they should be barred," Janney explained.

After a closed session yesterday on the touchy receiving barn question, Janney promised some changes would be made in Maryland's rules. The commission's proposal that the receiving barn be retained but that the horsemen will be responsible for their horses' condition has drawn protests from owners and trainers.

No final decision on that and prerace and postrace saliva tests was made yesterday.

5 Polio Cases Boost Total Treated in Area to 109

Hospitals Admit 30-Year-Old Woman, 2 Girls, Boy, Youth; 5 More in Virginia

Five new cases yesterday boosted to 109 the number of persons in Greater Washington treated for polio this year.

The new cases included:

A 30-year-old District woman whose home is in the 400 block of Orange st. se. She entered Gallinger Hospital August 29.

A 17-month-old girl from the 1000 block of 8th st. nw., admitted to Gallinger Hospital August 30.

A 3-year-old boy from Fairmont Heights, Md., admitted to Children's Hospital August 30.

A 13-year-old girl from Cheverly, Md., admitted to Children's Hospital August 30.

A 18-year-old youth, a resident of the 1700 block Upshur st. nw., admitted to Gallinger Hospital yesterday after treatment at Suburban Hospital.

The new cases boosted the District's polio total this year to 58 and the cases of persons from outside the District to 51. The figures for this time last year were six District residents and 12 nonresidents.

In Virginia five new cases were reported to the State Health Department, upping the State's total for the year to 263 cases. Two cases were dropped.

In North Carolina additional postponements of school openings and large meetings were announced as 29 new cases of infantile paralysis were reported. The new cases moved the State's total for the year to 1808, and the August total to 563.

A PLUMBER MAINTENANCE MAN CARPENTER

Mrs. Dorothy Brisson is the "maintenance man" at the Kerpel School of Dental Technology

Temperature Today to Be Moderate

High Not to Exceed 78 Degrees, 2 Below Peak of Yesterday

This is a day of lightness and cheer.

No more soggy suits and heat flashes. No hurricane winds whipping down trees and electric lines.

The heat wave that gripped and baked Washington last week was only an unpleasant memory yesterday as balmy breezes wafted moderate temperatures through the air.

Yesterday's high mercury mark was 80 at 4:32 p. m. and the weatherman said today's high temperature shouldn't top 78. The day will be mostly sunny.

The cool spell is expected to continue tonight and probably through Thursday.

That hurricane which was running wild south of here Monday had evaporated as a threat as it headed out over the Atlantic.

The weatherman said, "There is no longer danger of high winds along the coast."

At a late hour yesterday, the storm was reported 300 miles east northeast of Cape Hatteras.

However, the Weather Bureau at Miami, Fla., warned that another hurricane may be brewing in the Atlantic some 450 miles east northeast of Martinique, a French island in the Lesser Antilles.

The bureau reported a Navy hurricane hunter plane has been sent into the area to investigate reports of the new disturbance by the steamship Benjamin Griegson. The ship said it had passed through winds of 50 to 60 miles an hour velocity in an area some 400 miles south of the breeding ground from which the present Atlantic blow started.

The Navy flew more than 100 planes from Anacostia Naval Air Station to inland dispersal points.

Bolling Field had planned to evacuate a similar number of planes and had ordered pilots to be available. However, the planned evacuation was canceled at 2 p. m.

Chaplain Chief to Speak

Rear Admiral William N. Thomas, Chief of Chaplains, USN, will address a luncheon meeting of the Junior Board of Commerce in the Burlington Hotel Thursday at 12:30 p. m.

School Hails Maintenance Man in Skirts

Whacking away with hammer and nails is a far cry from the usual occupations of women, but it is all in a day's work to Mrs. Dorothy Brisson, and she loves it.

Mrs. Brisson is "maintenance man" at the Kerpel School of Dental Technology, Inc., 820 7th st. nw. In that capacity she uses not only hammer and nails but saws—hand and power, a Stillson wrench, and other impediments of a jack-of-all-trades.

School officials swear by their "maintenance man." They say Mrs. Brisson is as good as any man at her work—which, from men, is quite a recommendation.

After her marriage, she settled with her husband on Long Island and raised a family of six. Mrs. Brisson came to Washington about three years ago after divorce ended her marriage, and at last got around to testing her ingenuity in "building things." She worked first for the Virginia School of Prosthetics in Alexandria, and at the beginning of this year started her present job. She lives at 304 E st. nw.

"I can't always figure out how to build something," she said yesterday. "Like some molding. It took me a long time to work out how you make corners. I finally saw that you use a coping saw to trime the corners to fit."

She has built a cloakroom, painted walls, laid floors, unstopped plumbing—done anything a maintenance man would do, and can lug lumber around with the best of 'em.

First Term Pupils Registration To Start Today

District youngster entering school for the first time this year will be able to register today from 1 to 3 p. m. at all elementary schools throughout the city.

Parents are required to present birth and vaccination cirtificates for the children. Pupils eligible for the first grade must be 6 years old or must reach their sixth birthday by November 1. To enter kindergarten youngsters must be 5 by November 1.

Elementary schools also will be open for registration Thursday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Friday, 8:30 a. m. to 5 p m; Tuesday, 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., and September 9, 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Rent Boost Plan Filed For Greenbelt

A varying schedule of proposed rental "adjustments" in the town of Greenbelt has been submitted to area rent control officials by the Public Housing Administration, it was learned yesterday.

The schedule, which would provide rent increases for nearly all of the town's 1800 tenants, was received yesterday afternoon by W. L. Thompson of Silver Spring, rent control representative for Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties. Thompson said he had not had an opportunity to study the proposed adjustments.

Charles M. Cormack, community manager for the Public Housing Administration in Greenbelt, said the proposed scale had been filed under a Federal rent control law which permits Government-owned housing developments to adjust rents to a scale comparable with those of areas surrounding the developments involved.

PHA did not release the full schedule because it is "too complex," being based on individual cases and involving all of the homes in the town, officials said.

3 Key Bridge Lanes To Washington Closed

Only one of three usual traffic lanes on Key Bridge for automobiles entering Washington will be open today.

District highway officials explained that the other two lanes will be used by concrete trucks working on the K st. elevated highway. The three lanes of Key Bridge for traffic bound out of Washington will not be affected. Officials advised motorists driving into Washington from Virginia to use one of the other bridges—Chain Bridge, Highway Bridge, or Memorial Bridge.

22 Counties Reply to Tuck On Pleas for Aid to Schools

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—Governor Tuck disclosed today that 22 counties had replied to his query on why they had seen fit to recommend a special session of the Legislature to provide taxes for aid in local school construction.

The most recent replies were from Culpeper, Montgomery, Spotsylvania and Greenesville Counties. All except Spotsylvania have urged a special session and recommended a sales tax.

Paul Hounshell, division superintendent of schools of Culpeper, said many citizens had approached members of the county school board and asked the board to "bring to bear what pressure it could for a sales tax for school building construction and debt service."

He noted that the people who came to the board seemed to believe that a sales tax would distribute taxes to all the people and that the levy of $2.30 a $100 valuation of personal property tax was too high. He noted that the county was spending approximately $900,000 for new and old buildings and that another $400,000 would be needed to complete a new high school and replace some old buildings.

Hounshell said, "we do not believe that our taxpayers will agree to go into debt for schools as much as 10 per cent of all taxable property in this county. We do believe that our people would favor a sales tax for school capital outlay and debt service if they were given an opportunity to vote on this question."

He told the Governor the vote of the board was unanimous.

A. B. Correll, clerk of the board of supervisors of Montgomery County, said his board voted unanimously, and "the action was taken without pressure from any group of citizens or any individuals." He added that there were no public hearings.

H. L. Webb, division superintendent of the Greenesville County schools, said no persons appeared before the board on its resolution to the Governor nor were there any public hearings held with reference to the resolution.

District Gets 2 2-3 Million Highway Fund

FWA Awards Slice Of Improvement Grant Totaling 450 Million

The Federal Works Agency yesterday granted the District a $2,642,820 slice of a 450-million-dollar highways improvement grant.

The District's share was split by the agency into $1,018,601 for "urban roads;" $649,688 for "feeder roads," and $974,531 for "primary roads."

The money was provided under the 1948 Federal-Aid Highway Act for the fiscal year 1950, but will be available for use from next July.

District highway officials said they will use the funds in this way:

The $1,018,601 provided for urban roads will go into a Washington Circle underpass that will place K st. underground. The depression will start at 21st st. and continue to 27th st. where it will link with the K st. elevated highway now under construction. Funds also will be used to provide service roadways flanking the underpass at street level.

Out of the second grant, District highway officials plan to extend the K st. highway with service roads to Connecticut ave.

The $649,688 for feeder roads will place Kansas ave. under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks from Blair rd. to Chillum pl. ne.

It also is to provide for structures needed to change Military rd. into a dual highway. The structures include a bridge over Rock Creek, a ramp leading to the golf course and a culvert. Military rd. is to be paved out of second-year funds.

With the $974,531 for primary roads, the highway department plans to help pay for approach roadways at both the District and Virginia entrances to the new twin bridges over the Potomac at 14th st. Land is to be purchased from Virginia out of the grant for the south approach. Funds will be used for landscaping.

The grant for primary roads also will include new roadway connections to the South Capitol bridge, improvement of South Capitol st. from Canal rd. to M st., and widening of Military rd. underpass at 16th st. to accommodate a dual highway.

2 Surveyors Bid on Job for Falls Church

Bids from two engineering firms who want to survey land adjoining Falls Church, Va., for possible annexation by that city were received last night by the outgoing Falls Church City Council in its final meeting.

Bids were received from the firms of Johnson & Williams of Washington, who made a $14,000 bid and the Lynchburg (Va.) firm of Wiley & Wilson which bid on a cost-plus basis, giving no estimate.

Both firms said their survey would include maps of the maximum area in Fairfax County to be annexed and an estimate of property values in the area proposed for annexation to determine whether it can pay for the improvements it needs.

The council moved that selection of the winning bid be referred to the incoming city council, which holds its first meeting at 8 p. m. today in the city hall.

Attending their final meeting last night were retiring Councilman Walter B. Follin, a telephone company service foreman with six years on the council, and James E. Durant, an auditor for Radio Station WARL who has served two years on the council. Also retiring was Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove, a contractor.

County Acts To Ease Load On Schools

Creation of Rigid Districts One of Six Steps Taken by Arlington Board

The Arlington School Board last night announced six new moves to ease overcrowding and heavy teacher loads in county public schools.

Most comprehensive change will be the formation of rigid school districts in Arlington. This will affect only first grade children entering school September 14.

Registration for all first graders will be held September 7 at 10 a. m. The board will prepare detailed maps of new school districts to aid parents in determining what schools their children will attend.

Other Changes Made

Other changes announced last night were:

1. Twenty-two fifth and sixth grade students from the Pickett Homes School will be transferred to the Patrick Henry School, where they will register September 7. Board members said Pickett is overcrowded and lacks facilities for older children.

2. Seventy-seven fifth and sixth graders at Shirley Homes School will be moved to the Nellie Curtis school. They will register September 13 at their old school.

3. Plans for transfer of 41 Hume School fifth and sixth graders to Nellie Custis. They will register at their old schools on September 13.

Go to James Monroe

4. Children from the Colonial Village apartment development who formerly attended Woodrow Wilson School now will attend the James Monroe School. The shift will make emergency seventh grade facilities available in Woodrow Wilson and relieve overcrowding at Arlington's junior high schools.

Also last night, the board appointed Mrs. Mae Van Meter of 3406 Lee blvd., Arlington, as principal of Patrick Henry Elementary School at a salary of $4400. Mrs. Van Meter, a former teacher at Washington-Lee High School, headed the Arlington nursery school program during the war.

Jury Trials Granted 9 in Whisky Cases

Nine persons, eight of whom were arrested August 20 in simultaneous raids on three Washington after-hours clubs, yesterday were granted jury trials after pleading not guilty to charges of keeping and selling whisky without a license.

Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon set the trial date for October 21 and continued bond at $500 for each. He granted Defense Attorneys Charles E. Ford and Milford F. Schwartz 10 days in which to withdraw the pleas and file motions.

All of the persons arrested were officers or employes of the three clubs, which were the Allies Club, 1326 Massachusetts ave. nw., the Spotlight Guild, 1154 17th st. nw., and the Five O'Clock Club, 621 Pennsylvania ave. nw. In addition, charges were filed against each of the clubs as corporations. The Five O'Clock Club was also charged with operating a restaurant without a license.

Ford said yesterday that there may be a question of the legality of the arrest of some of the individuals since the violation with which they are charged is only a misdemeanor and must be committed in the presence of the arresting officer.

The raids were made by police after a number of undercover men allegedly purchased drinks of whisky at each of the clubs over a period of several weeks. Legally, the clubs can sell only "set-ups" to members who bring their own liquor.

Those who were charged in court yesterday were: From the Allies Club, Stanley Stewart Gordon, 47, of 1326 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Louis Wilbert Strickland, 51, of 1301 Vermont ave. nw., vice president; Thomas Gregory McGee, 39, of 1120 Vermont ave. nw., bartender, and Mary Louise Stephens, 26, of 3500 13th st. nw., waitress.

From the Spotlight Guild, Vincent Richard Grillo, 45, of 2564 University pl. nw., president, and Mary Ethel Stoltz, 27, of 1012 Bryant st. ne., waitress.

From the Five O'Clock Club, Julius Joseph Levy, vice president and treasurer, who was charged after the raid; William George Benjamin, 34, 7601 Wildwood dr., Takoma Park, Md., president and manager, and Mary Jane Dowd, 22, of 3035 M st. nw., waitress.

The Corporation Counsel's office dropped charges against two persons originally arrested in the raids. They were: Amelia Swann, 33, of 1341 Adams st. ne., a waitress, and Frances Morton, 26, of 1436 B st. se., a cashier, both employed at the Five O'Clock Club.

Complaint of Police Beating Filed Formally by Navy Man

A letter complaining that he was beaten by police Saturday night after his arrest was directed yesterday to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, by Navy Chief Radioman Archibald I. Koesster.

Barrett is absent on leave and it was presumed the complaint would be acted upon by Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, acting superintendent.

Koester wrote:

"I believe the officers responsible for the treatment complained of reflect dishonor and discredit on the Metropolitan Police Department, and that you will wish to take appropriate action."

Truscott had left his office when the letter was received at police headquarters.

Earlier in the day, Truscott had issued a general order to the police force directing that the Naval Shore Patrol be notified in all arrests involving Navy personnel, except those for traffic violations.

Truscott's directive read:

"Lieut. Commander McIntyre, commander of the Naval Shore Patrol, Potomac River Naval Command, has requested that his office be notified in the case of the arrest of any Naval service personnel, Navy or Marine Corps, officer or enlisted, other than traffic cases where collateral is to be posted and forfeited and the personnel has the collateral available.

"This request is not made in an effort to supersede the civil processes but to amplify and assure cooperation between the police department and the naval service. They will respond at any hour of the day or night when notified and assist the civil authorities in any way. Commanding officers will bring this to the attention of their station force who in turn shall see that the Naval Shore Patrol is notified."

In his complaint Koester specifically charges he requested police at the No. 7 Precinct Station to contact the Shore Patrol after his arrest, but says they refused to do so.

According to Koester, he was in his car with his wife and friends, at Wisconsin ave. and M st. nw., at the time of his arrest. He said he had driven up beside a police scout car to make an inquiry, that he was ordered to get inside the scout car and that when he questioned this order he was beaten over the head, suffering wounds that later required 15 stitches to close.

Koester alleges that he was later beaten at No. 7 Precinct Station after treatment at Georgetown University Hospital, that he was denied water while held in a cell for seven hours and that he was refused permission to call Navy authorities, a doctor or an attorney.

Police have not denied striking Koester but their version of the incident is greatly different.

They said Koester was arrested after he became profane. They said force was necessary to subdue him because he bit two policemen and struck and tried to choke police officers.

Koester, who is 30 and lives in Falls Church, Va., forfeited $15 on a drunk and disorderly charge. He is free in $500 bond on an assault charge. His attorney, Emmett L. Sheehan, said he will ask that the forfeiture be set aside on the grounds it was done without his client's knowledge or consent.

Horse Is Named As 'Corespondent' In Divorce Case

A horse was named as "corespondent" yesterday in District Court by Mrs. Pauline H. Jones, 3810 Davis pl. nw., who asked a limited divorce from her husband, Towner F. Jones, executive secretary in the office of the assistant administrator of the Economic Cooperative Administration.

She contends that her husband moved to Colvin Run, Va., near Leesburg, so he could give closer attention to his horse, Shenandoah.

Playing second fiddle to an equine favorite caused Mrs. Jones great "humiliation and mental anguish," the suit contends.

Jones denied his horse had anything to do with the matter.

"A lot of oats," said he.

The Joneses were married October 30, 1947, at Frederick, Md.

Montgomery Avoids Pre-Tax Borrowing First Time Since '32

For the first time in 16 years, issuance of tax-anticipation certificates to operate Montgomery County, Md., until taxes are collected will not be necessary this year.

County Comptroller Alexander K. Hancock informed the Montgomery County commissioners at their meeting in Rockville yesterday that unexpectedly early receipts will provide finances for the early part of the tax year.

Ordinarily, it is necessary to issue tax-anticipation certificates at a very low interest rate in amounts ranging from $200,000 to $400,000 to carry on county offices while tax collections are being made. The fiscal year starts July 1 but taxes ordinarily do not start coming in until September and October.

Also helping to make the new situation possible, Hancock said, were an early return of $400,000 from the Liquor Control Board and increased receipts from corporation personal property taxes and the tax on recording deeds for real estate.

County volunteer fire department heads closeted with the county commissioners in secret session for more than an hour. It was learned that they complained to the board that the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad is responding to emergency calls in areas outside Bethesda-Chevy Chase. The fire officials said their apparatus often responded to calls to find that the patient had been moved by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase crew.

Bids on Fairfax Drive, Staunton Bypass Opened

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—The State Highway Department announced apparent low bidders on two large primary projects at Staunton and in Arlington to cost nearly one million dollars.

The largest single project calls for 1.52 miles of Fairfax Drive in Arlington County.

The other large project, the Staunton bypass on Route 211, will ultimately carry traffic away from the center of the city.

4 Men Leave Vice Squad in Mysterious Police Shift

Shuffle Effective Today on Barrett's Order; Roche Is 1 Of 6 New Members

A mysterious shuffle of the police vice squad yesterday resulted in the sudden transfer of four men from the squad and the assignment of six new members.

The transfers, announced by Acting Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott, will become effective today.

Truscott would not comment on the reasons behind the shuffle. He said the changes were ordered by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, who is currently absent on leave.

Nor would Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, make any comment.

"You'll have to see the boss," he said.

The changes were viewed as significant in the light of the vice squad's expanded activities in recent months.

The vice squad prepared the groundwork for the Police Department's suddenly declared war on after-hour bottle clubs. And Vice Squad Boss Blick and Truscott mapped the simultaneous raids on three of the prominent bottle spots August 20.

In addition, the vice squad has figured in the investigation of a special grand jury into gambling in the District. Blick testified at length before the grand jury, and the vice squad turned over its list of "known gamblers" to the grand jury.

Moved from the vice squad are Pvt. Charles H. Calderwood, who goes to No. 13 Precinct; Pvt. Henry W. Eastman, transferred to No. 2; Pvt. Arthur H. Molle, moved to the robbery squad, and Pvt. Mark W. Gray, transferred to No. 1.

Calderwood had been with the squad since January, 1943; Eastman, since April, 1942; Molle, since 1945, and Gray, since January, 1947.

Detective Sergt. James Roche, who recently was moved from the vice squad to the robbery squad, returns to the vice squad in the new transfer move.

Others assigned to the vice squad are Sergt. Albert B. Nicholson of No. 10; Probationary Detective Olaf J. Schelin of No. 1; Pvt. William C. Clark of No. 2; Angelo S. Bonaccorsy of No. 6, and Pvt. Salvatore J. Greco of No. 13.

In other transfers, affecting only precincts, Sergt. George Weaver moves from No. 1 to No. 10, and Sergt. Thomas C. Sullivan from No. 2 to No. 1.

6 White House Police to Gain Corporal Rank

Six White House police guards will be promoted to the rank of corporal today, subsequent to the creation of that rank by John J. Maloney, chief of the United States Secret Service Bureau.

"The rank of corporal," Maloney explained, "is being created because of the extra responsibility that some posts have carried." The posts referred to are entrances used by the public, and strategic points in the house itself.

All metropolitan precincts received authorization for the rank of corporal during the war years but White House police, under the supervision of the Treasury department, were not included at the time.

The present White House police complement consists of 106 men, including one inspector, four lieutenants and six sergeants.

White House Inspector Hobart W. Francis said the six men to be promoted were chosen on a seniority basis, and that all had, at one time or another, served in metropolitan precincts.

The six privates selected for promotion are: Hollis H. Clark, 46, of 1704 Russell rd., Alexandria, Va.; John J. Cash, 42, of 1715 B st. se.; Richard P. Hallion, 45, of 3725 12th st. ne.; Thomas W. Holder, 49, of 118 U st. ne.; Theodore A. Schultz, 49, of 2119 F st. nw., and Lee H. Wolfe, 49, 2525 33rd st. se.

Annual salary for police corporals is $3668.97. Salaries of police privates range from $2720.95 to $3398.11.

Four Air Force Escapees Captured

Four Air Force prisoners were captured by Prince Georges County police yesterday after they had made a pre-dawn escape through a ventilator on the roof of the Bolling Air Force Base stockade.

Maj. John F. Blakistone, provost marshal at the air base, said the escape was discovered at the morning prison call. The four had been brought to Bolling from other bases to await disposition of AWOL charges.

The four are: Pvt. Robert W. Schweiker, 17; Pvt. William N. Pettiford, 19, both of Philadelphia; Pvt. Edward F. Driscoll, 24, Phoenixville, Pa., and Pfc. Elmer L. Miller, 21, Allentown, Pa.

Schweiker and Pettiford were picked up at about 5 a. m. in Hyattsville and questioned in connection with an attempt by two soldiers to break into a school. Driscoll and Miller were captured an hour later.

Bike Repair Ordered

An Arlington man, charged with deliberately running his car into a 14-year-old girl's parked bicycle August 17, was ordered by the Arlington County Court yesterday to repair the damages and appear for further hearing September 14.

Lallie Campbell, owner of the bike, testified that Erskine R. Sauls of 2040 N. Stafford st. had threatened to "run over" her bicycle if she ever again left it leaning up against a bank in the road in front of her home at 2714 Marcey rd. The street has no sidewalks. Sauls said yesterday the bicycle had been left beneath the front wheels of his car and he didn't see it.

Last Rites for Former Chief Justice

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FUNERAL IN NEW YORK—The casket of Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, leaves Riverside Church in New York City yesterday. It was taken to Woodlawn Cemetery for private burial rites. Grant's tomb is in background

New York, Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Seven members of the Supreme Court and some 2000 other mourners today attended funeral services for Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States and twice Governor of New York.

The simple services were held in towering gray Riverside Church. In accordance with one of Justice Hughes' last wishes, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor emeritus and his longtime friend, conducted the services.

Fosdick praised Hughes for his "altitude and graciousness," his strength of character, his "spacious mind and unique ability" and the heritage he left to all mankind.

"We shall never think of him in the past tense, simply," he said. "He will always be a vivid present reality."

Private burial services were held at Woodlawn Cemetery.

Among the leading dignitaries at the funeral were Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, the personal representative of President Truman; Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, John E. Peurifoy, the representative of the State Department and Supreme Court Justices Harold Burton, Felix Frankfurter, Hugo L. Black, Robert H. Jackson, Wiley Rutledge and Stanley Forman Reed, and former Justice Owen Roberts.

Hughes died Friday at Osterville, Mass., at the age of 86.

Kensington To Pay Debts With Loan

The Kensington Town Council has voted to borrow $14,000 from the American Security & Trust Co. of Washington to pay off outstanding debts of the town.

The bank will loan the money for five years at 3 per cent interest. The action was recommended by a committee composed of Councilman Raymond Weber, Attorney Thomas Jackson and Edwin Conklin. The council voted to obtain the loan at its meeting Monday night.

A delegation representing merchants of the area, composed of Philip McCurdy, Mrs. Irma Thompson and Leslie Ball, appeared to urge lifting the ban on parking on Howard ave. between Lincoln and Connecticut aves., as an aid to business in that section. The council informed them they should take the proposal up with the State Roads Commission as the town has no authority over State roads.

The council voted to request permission from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to install a pedestrian underpass between Homewood and Kensington under the railroad tracks. Property owners have given the necessary rights of way, Dr. J. A. I. Parker, councilman, reported.

The council said it will ask the Valite Co., a road material manufacturing company, to curb dust and fumes from its plant at Kensington.

Mrs. Smith Retires, Long a Secretary In Navy Bureau

Mrs. Mayme Ellen Smith, secretary to various heads of the Navy Department's ordnance bureau for 24 years and an administrative assistant in the bureau for the past 7 years retired yesterday at the age of 60.

Mrs. Smith

Mrs. Smith, in charge of civilian awards in the ordnance bureau since 1941, received one herself Monday from Rear Admiral A. G. Noble, chief of the bureau, who presented her with a Navy Meritorious Civilian Service Award. The accompanying citation praised her "steadfast loyalty, zealous devotion to duty and cheerful willingness to cooperate."

Mrs. Smith joined the Navy Department in 1917 after 8 months of service in the United States Naval Reserve Force as a yeoman during World War I.

Mrs. Smith, who lives with her husband, Herbert F. Smith, at 1403 N. Highland st., Arlington, says that after a vacation in Florida she plans to "sit and rock."

U. S. Attache Dies of Polio In Brussels

Clifton B. Shoemaker, jr., 27, an attache of the American Embassy in Brussels, Belgium, and nephew of Mrs. I. E. Shoemaker of 4814 Connecticut ave. nw., died Monday in Brussels.

Lt. Shoemaker

The Associated Press reported yesterday that death was attributed to infantile paralysis. He was stricken by the malady on Friday.

A native of Long Beach, Calif., Mr. Shoemaker was the son of Clifton B. Shoemaker and Mrs. Mary Arbeely Shoemaker of Glendora, Calif. His parents are native Washingtonians.

Mr. Shoemaker was graduated in 1941 from Pomona College, Claremont, Calif., and that year came to Washington to attend the State Department's Foreign Service Institute. Several months later, he was commissioned in the Navy and went on active duty here. He also served in Panama, Algiers, North Africa.

Discharged from active duty here in 1944, he rejoined the State Department. When he completed his tudies at the Foreign Service Institute, he was sent to Brussels in January, 1947.

Besides his parents and his aunt, he is survived by two uncles, Spencer A. Shoemaker, of 104 Wooten ave., Friendship Heights, Md., and Maynard P. Shoemaker, of 9 West Underwood st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Military services for Mr. Shoemaker will be held Thursday at an Anglican Episcopal Church in Brussels, in which he was a vestryman. For his friends and family here, requiem mass, including the Episcopal burial office, will be said Thursday at 9:30 a.m. at the Ascension and St. Agnes Church, 12th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., with the rector, the Rev. Albert J. DuBois, officiating. Burial will be later in Glendora, Calif.

Wankowicz, Polish Official In D. C., Dies

Witold Wankowicz, 60, counselor of the Polish Embassy here at the outbreak of World War II, died yesterday at 4 a. m. at his home, 4024 Lorcom le., Arlington.

Mr. Wankowicz

Mr. Wankowicz had been ill with cancer since last April, when he left his post as chief of the United Nations' Relinef and Rehabilitation Administration's Dodecanese Mission.

Well known in Wahington during his embassy assignment from 1935 to 1949, Mr. Wankowicz had been in his country's service from 1925 until the war's outbreak, and later took an active part in organizing Nolish relief organizations in America.

Born in Warsaw in 1888, Mr. Wankowicz was graduated from Cambridge University in England in 1912 where, in 1933, he received a master's degree.

He was a member of the governing board of the Polish Red Cross organization during World War I, and later was assistant representative of the Polish government with the Hoover relief organization in Danzig until 1920.

For the next five years, Mr. Wankowciz was director of the Polish Shipping and Navigation Co. in Danzig. In 1925 he came to America as commercial counselor of the Embassy here.

In 1931, the Polish official was appointed chief of the treaty section of the Polish Ministry of Commerce in Warsaw. Between then and 1935, when he returned to Washington, he served as acting director of the ministry's Commerce Department in negotiations with Sweden, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Danzig, Estonia, Latvia and England.

After the outbreak of World War II, Mr. Wankowicz served with the British Ministry of Supply Mission here, and was assistant director of the mission when he accepted the UNRRA post.

Since his illness last April, he had spent his time writing poetry, which is to be published in England.

Mr. Wankowicz is survived by his wife, Mrs. Yolande Wankowicz of Arlington; three daughters, Mrs. Irene Popiel, who is living in the Belgian Congo; Mrs. Mary H. Welch of Manchester, Mass., and Miss Yola Wankowicz of Arlington, and a son, Paul, also of Arlington.

Requiem mass will be said Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at St. Agnes' Catholic Church in Cherrydale, Arlington County. The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen of Catholic University will officiate. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Ben Hill Simmons, Sr.

Funeral services for Ben Hill Simmons, sr., 66, special assistant to the Army Inspector General, were held Monday at Holy Comforter Episcopal Church, 7th and Oglethorpe sts. nw. Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Simmons, a Government employe for more than 40 years, died Friday at his home, 7701 Georgia ave. nw.

A native of Ludville, Ga., he was first employed by the War Department in 1906 as clerk in the office of the chief of staff. The following year he went to Cuba and for two years was a stenographer in the Headquarters of the Army of Cuban Pacification. He was assigned to the office of the Inspector General in 1909 and in 1932 became chief clerk and administrative assistant. In 1941 he was designated special assistant.

Mr. Simmons had been awarded the 10-year service ribbon, the 25-year civilian service emblem and an emblem for exceptional civilian service.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katherin Louise Simmons; his 89-year-old mother, Mrs. John F. Simmons of Jasper, Ga.; two sons, John F. and Ben Hill Simmons, jr., of Washington; four sisters, Miss Addie Simmons of Jasper, Mrs. R. H. May and Mrs. W. H. Inman of Washington, and Mrs W. T. Hall of Graham, N. C., and by six grandchildren.

Printing Union Hit by Leader Of Pressmen

Pressmen's Home, Tenn., Aug. 31 (AP).—President George L. Berry of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union (AFL) took an indirect dig today at the International Typographical Union.

Departing from his prepared text in an address at the union's thirty-eighth quadrennial convention in which he denounced the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, Berry, without mentioning the ITU by name, said:

"It is unfortunate for the printing industry of America that it is being disturbed because the printing trades unions of this country have attempted to stop our business on the theory that they are above the law of the Nation."

Berry said the Pressmen's Union, which he has headed for many years, regarded conciliation and arbitration of its disputes with management as an "obligation."

"When I say the overwhelming majority of management of industry, over which our jurisdiction extends, are as much in opposition to this law (Taft-Hartley) as we are, I know what I am talking about," he continued.

"Outside of Chicago, forty-eight daily newspapers have been lost as a result of a course of insanity by another trade union. The pathetic part is the suffering of the rank and file families of the organization pursuing the utterly impossible course of action."

The pressmen dedicated their one-million-dollar technical trade school, which Berry said was made possible by what he termed the union's "policy of industrial peace."

Troopers Help 400 Workers Back to Jobs

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 31 (AP).—The Bucyrus-Erie plant here, closed for a month by a strike, reopened today with 140 State troopers on hand to protect some 400 employes who went back to work. Two pickets were arrested.

There was some jeering from a crowd of several hundred persons massed outside the plant as about 400 workers, flanked by State troopers, marched through the gates.

The two men the troopers arrested on disorderly conduct charges are Ed Ritter, sergeant-at-arms of Local 813, CIO-United Electrical Workers, the union that called the strike, and Lee Eakins.

The strike was called last July 30. Company officials have said they will not bargain with the union because it is "Communist dominated."

The plant officials said a number of employes had signified a desire to return to work and they got a court order last week restraining mass picketing.

Mediator Leaves For West Coast

The Federal Mediation Service yesterday sent one of its ace conciliators to the West Coast in an effort to head off a threatened maritime strike September 2.

William N. Margolis, assistant to Conciliation Director Cyrus S. Ching, left for San Francisco and will try to revive negotiations between the Waterfront Employers Association and maritime unions, including Harry Bridges' longshoremen.

The unions are now under an 80-day anti-strike injunction issued under the Taft-Hartley Act. The court order expires September 2 and a walkout is feared.

September 24 Set For Moore's Reply

A Government referee yesterday refused to dismiss a Federal complaint accusing Ralph Moore, Washington trader, of violating the Commodity Exchange Act.

Moore was given until September 24 to file an answer to the complaint, which was issued by the Agriculture Department.

It accuses Moore of failing to report speculative transactions in grains and lard in accordance with the law. It also alleges that he circulated a "press memorandum" giving what the complaint said was erroneous information on Government lard purchase plans with the ojective of influencing prices.

Moore has denied the accusations.

Celebrate Wilhelmina's 50th Anniversary

EVERYTHING was in orange yesterday at the Netherlands Embassy. There were six different kinds of orange flowers in the drawing rooms, and a huge cake with orange icing on the buffet table. The Ambassadress, Mme. Van Kleffens, wore a Dutch decoration of orange ribbon on her white organdy dress.

Little Jansen, the Ambassador's miniature black poodle, was much too excited even to appear at the party. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of the reign of Queen Wilhelmina and her birthday as well. Queen Wilhelmina's reign of the Netherlands dates back to her eighteenth birthday, when she came of age. The orange cake, iced with a crown and a W, was circled with five candles, each marking five years.

Members of the Netherlands colony in Washington and a contingent from Baltimore were received by the Ambassador and Mme. Van Kleffens between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock. Mme. Stam, wife of the Netherlands Naval Attache, sang a selection of Dutch songs during the receiving hours.

Wilted Leis Are Mementos Of Weekend Trip to Hawaii On Navy's Jumbo Plane

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF., Aug. 31.—I just returned from an agonizingly brief Honolulu weekend and am weighted down with grass skirts, straw slippers, tapa cloth shirts, coconut palm hats, over a dozen assorted, extremely wilted leis and a staggering amount of delightfully extraneous information.

Without too much effort, this department learned the "w" in Hawaii is pronounced "v," that rain is liquid sunshine, that de rigeur presentation of a lei involves a double-barreled kiss, that anyone you don't like is "geok," that it is a good idea not to order more than one zombie.

To show the armed forces no partiality we were ferried from California mainland, a slight matter of 2400 land miles, in one of the Mars type, jumbo Navy flyingboat transports. We received what is known as the "glitter" treatment, which was very satisfactory indeed.

The Mariannas Mars, which we rode, grosses only 20 tons less than the new Caroline Mars, which made the record nonstop flight from Honolulu to Chicago last week.

As if it weren't sufficiently fantastic to watch the mechanical apparatus of a freight ship the interior is so huge it's nostalgically reminiscent of the dear old Union Station. There are two "decks" and on this special trip over 50 Navy passengers, to say nothing of crew and a handful of trainees along for ride experience.

We occupied one of the four bunks—a lower one and most comfortable—and though the Navy had solicitously offered us a sleeping pill, we slept so well we had to be shaken awake as we circled down over Honolulu.

Within a trice we saw Maj. Gen. Ralph Wooten, the retiring commander of the Pacific Air Command, and Mrs. Wooten, as well as Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey and his wonderfully effervescent Juanita.

The Wootens, who recently sold their 29th and Q st. property, are leaving Hawaii September 1, arrive in Washington after stopovers and eventually hope to go to Brazil. Admiral Ramsey, since leaving the Capital, has acquired no less than three titles. A sheer case of gilding the lily, "Duke" Ramsey is now cammander in chief of the Pacific and of the United States Pacific Fleet.

Hawaiian Decorating Note

JUANITA has done over their quarters with skill and artistry. The lower floors have been painted pale green (including the double pianos which the Admiral and Captain Waters play with professional technique and verve). The lanai, or Hawaiian equivalent of a porch, is done up with a bamboo bar, comfortable furniture upholstered in vivid watermelon pinks, brighter greens. The exceedingly effective new curtains are of 36-cents-a-yard bleached muslin banded with folds of the upholstery colors.

The only oddments Mrs. R. brought from Washington are items from her collection of copper and brass jugs, receptacles, pitchers. Orchids were in most of the vases, the dining table centerpiece was a magnificent mass of gardenias, white gladioli and ginger flowers.

With military "aller et venir," hostess obligations are terrific. For example, the Wootens were flooded under with farewell parties, climaxed by an aloha affair at the Officers Club, at which 900 showed up. Mrs. Ramsey then dined all the top ranking officers and their wives. Feature of last Friday night's occasion was a song plus words composed by the Admiral and Captain Waters, who both played and recorded it for posterity.

The naval base is called Makalapa, and so, appropriately, the song's tentatively titled "Good Old Makalapa."

A Bargain in Fine Living

THOUGH rents are sky high and there is a painful dearth of houses suitable to limited officer incomes, the actual military, social facilities in Hawaii are superb.

We were billeted at the reasonable price of a dollar a day at the Makalapa bachelor officers' quarters, a long, rambling building which includes mess, ballroom, pool room, everything to make life on a smallish island doubly agreeable. For our dollar we had bedroom, sitting room, bathroom with shower—a bargain any way you look at it.

At Hickam Field the Officers Club was decorated by Walter Lamb, one of the island's most accomplished decorators. Besides a great outside dance floor there are main rooms beautifully furnished in bamboo and bright curtains, there is a series of thatched huts strictly "kapu" or out of bounds for women. Here the officers play cards, do what they want, free of feminine sniping.

The Noncommissioned Officers Club is almost as grand, and their entertainment program would make anyone vert with envy. Movie stars and such glamourites pop up in steady stream, ignoring brass and scrambled eggs completely.

Miss Goodiel, Mr. Sprigg Wed

Hessler
MRS. WILLIAM SPRIGG, Jr.

The wedding of Miss Emily Elizabeth Goodiel and William Wilson Sprigg, jr., took place August 28 at 8 p. m. in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, the Rev. Henry W. Snyder, sr., officiating. The bride is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Carlton Duncan Goodiel and her husband is the son of Mrs. W. W. Sprigg and the late Mr. Sprigg of Louisville, Ky.

Colonel Goodiel gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was white silk marquisette. Her veil of imported illusion fell from a Juliet cap fastened with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses centered with a white orchid.

Miss Peggy Goodiel, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Eleanor June Ford, Miss Virginia Lynch and Miss Phyllis Brooks. Miss Starr Bullis, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid.

Robert Omer of Louisville, Ky., was best man, while Midshipman Carlton D. Goodiel, jr., brother of the bride, George Williams, of Louisville and James Thompson, of Winchester, Va., were ushers. Junior ushers were Clarke Bullis and Larry Bullis.

A reception was held at Officers' Club, Fort Leslie J. McNair.

Minister's Young Wife, Married Four Years, Thinks Seriously of Divorce or Slipping Out Of the Picture; Wonders if She's a Failure

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Luke is 36, I am 24, and we have been married four years. He is a minister, his work permits him to stay home as he likes, and he is paid by check once a month.

He holds the purse strings, spending as he likes, and most of the money goes for bills. He buys the groceries without consulting me, just brings in food and says, "I got so-and-so for dinner." I have to plead for anything I want, and usually he puts me off; but maybe that same night or a few days later, he goes out with friends and spends twice as much as I asked for.

Strangely enough, he can't go out unless he has something to drink, strong drink, not a half pint but a pint, which is costly, and if we don't come home early, he buys a second pint. He usually discusses our differences in company, telling what I can't do, what I don't do and what I should do, which is very painful for me and also for the listeners, I am sure.

Man Drinks Heavily, Jibes Wife Publicly

I HAVE held jobs and put my wages to good use, I think. Luke was in great need of clothes when I held my last job, whereas I still had some clothes left over from school, so I spent most of my earnings dressing him from the skin out, buying a little each pay day. But that's past and I feel like an unpaid servant in the home, doing what needs to be done without recompense.

I have thought seriously of divorce or just slipping quietly out of the picture; but this would distress our in-laws, who like both of us very much; and, too, it might mean that Luke would have to give up the ministry and find other work; but sometimes I think this might be better.

If he drinks heavily and thinks only of himself, is he suited to the ministry? He has no respect for the profession, a fact I try to cover; and when we have deep hot arguments about his attitude, he tells me to go back to my parents, that I don't have sense enough to be a wife. Am I a failure or is he at fault? Please advise.

R. S.

Man in Search of Soft Berth

DEAR R. S.: You write from a region where the majority of the population is so poorly educated as to be almost illiterate, which perhaps explains why the greedy, cynical, sadistic, hard-drinking Luke is able to palm himself off as a minister, with the aid of citified garb and maybe a thin veneer of theological schooling.

His behavior signifies that he hasn't the foggiest notion of what roads lead to God, nor any sense of the spirit in man, nor interest in communicating "the good, the beautiful and the true,"—the "bread of life"—to other folk. Thus I infer that he "got the call" to preach hell's fire and damnation to sinners simply as an easy way of making a living,—easier, at any rate, than digging in mines or doing mountaineer farming.

He appears to be a typical back-country mountaineer, weaned on hard liquor, figuratively speaking, imbued with insular fear of human society, also with Dark Ages contempt for women, as a supposedly inferior breed to men, somewhat in the same category of domestic animals as horses and dogs, to be fed and negligently valued as useful companions in their place,—but to be "broken" with abusive treatment if they attempt to assert independent temperament.

Bringing Marriage to Ruin

IN MY OPINION, the marriage is a tragic mesalliance for you, not because of the difference in ages (as you suggested in your long letter, here condensed), but because of Luke's general cussedness, which blocks you from being his helpmeet in any real sense.

Luke is an ignoramus, by and large, slothful and pleasure-hungry, deeply bitten by insecurity tensions and very defensive about his frailties, limitations and pretenses. However, he isn't so stupid that he doesn't know you are a praiseworthy person with plenty of sense; but for reasons rooted in his twisted character, he elects to tear you down and keep his foot on your neck, to give himself the semblance of higher stature, comparatively. Inasmuch as you have no children, divorce were a lesser evil than staying with him to be crushed, I think. M. H.

Chicory for Salads

Chicory, called endive in some localities, is an excellent choice for salads. Large heads usually weight about 1 pound and are enough for six generous salad servings; less of this green is needed, however, if it is to be combined with other vegetables.

No Marks on the Wall

Stick a thumb tack in each corner of the back of the picture and mirror frames so that when they are hung on the freshly papered walls the frames do not touch the wall paper at all. This will prevent dark streaks that so often form in back of pictures and mirrors.

Buying Eggs

Grade A eggs (firm yolks and white) are good for poaching, frying and cooking in water. The B grade eggs have less round yolk and thinner white but for scrambling and other cooking uses, the thrifty housewife can save on her food budget by buying them.

Top Lipstick With Jewels

Jeweled lipsticks are the height of elegance this season—and if your budget doesn't stretch to the new ones "bejewel" your own flat-topped lipstick. Simply de-shank a rhinestone button (no bigger than a dime). Nippers sneaked out of Dad's tool chest will snip off the metal button shank easily. Put several drops of household cement on top of the lipstick case and several more drops on the button back. Let stand long enough for cement to set, not harden—press button into place.

A reception was held at the home of the bride after which the couple left for a trip to New England. They will reside in Wilmington, Del.

Putting Away Summer Rugs

It is wise to treat summer rugs much the same as you do when storing winter wool rugs, as so many of the new summer rugs have rope in them as well as fiber materials and the rope is very appealing to moths. Clean them well, then sprinkle with camphor and roll in newspapers, tying securely.

Charles Armour's Rediscovery

Italian Style Collection Stresses 'Suit Complete'

By Peggy Preston

ITALY, with its great tradition in craftsmanship and fabric design, is being "rediscovered" by dressmakers in search of fresh inspiration.

One of the American designers who scorned Paris this season and, instead, went to Milan and Florence is Charles Armour, who brought his fall collection to Washington yesterday for a showing at Woodward & Lothrop's.

Several Italian originals, purchased by Mr. Armour during his stay in Milan, were shown, along with his own adaptations. The latter copied many of the jewel-like colors of the originals, but were simpler in design.

"The conditions of work and the demand for speed in this country do not always permit us to experiment with details and craftsmanship as much as we would like," Mr. Armour pointed out. "We are able to learn a great deal about dressmaking techniques from the European designers, but the American copies must be streamlined for local tastes and needs."

In his collection yesterday Mr. Armour again placed emphasis on the Suit Complete—the answer to every career woman's prayer, whether her mission is outside or inside the home. The Suit Complete, as this designer terms this particular ensemble, is a one-piece dress with companionate jacket, or a basic wool suit with separate couturier blouse.

MISS PRESTON

Such a costume can take a woman from shopping to club meeting; business conference or radio rehearsal, direct to an evening engagement. Greatest timesaver of all, perhaps, it obviates the sometimes harrowing quest for the "right blouse for my suit." The Armour blouses are made for each special suit. For instance, a soft black wool suit, with gently shaped jacket, has a mauve-pink taffeta blouse, pearl-buttoned in basque fashion. A red-rose taffeta blouse with quaint stand-up neck ruffle completes a fine-wale black suit, and the jacket is lined with the same rosy blouse, and so on.

The dress and jacket types give the Suit Complete idea to the woman who also wants a costume to carry her through every hour of a crowded day, but who prefers the lines of a dress. Fashioned in sheer wool as are most of the Armour costumes, it is a perfect basic dress alone. With the jacket it gives the impression of a soft suit.

FOR THE WOMAN who prefers to "make her own," Woodward & Lothrop had another fashion show in their store yesterday. It was conducted by Miss Charlotte Tonis, the Butterick Co.'s Fashion Advisor, and was entitled "Fall Fashions-Fall Fabrics-For You."

This fabric-fashion story covered the five main figure types—the Short Full, Tall Full, Average, Tall Thin and Short Thin. In her presentation Miss Tonis matched fabric to each figure type. The short full figure will actually grow larger when satin, in a bright color is used, she pointed out. By contrast, the same figure will be slimmed and heightened by the use of a dull surfaced fabric with neat, narrow stripes in muted shades.

The Washington Post

ONE of the Italian originals shown by Charles Armour, New York designer, at Woodward & Lothrop's yesterday. A cocktail costume suit dress with jacket, it is made of forest green sheer wool, the shirt and jacket lined with cerise taffeta. Hand-sewn trim is of black silk braid.

THE jacket dress which Mr. Armour has been sponsoring for several seasons continues to hold a prominent place in his collection. This one is of tissue thin black wool, the circular neckline embroidered in a floral design of rhinestones, pearls and silver braid. Matching jacket, which makes the dress suitable for street wear, has a single medallion of the same embroidery on the lapel and is lined with shocking pink crepe

Button Elegance

With a handful of buttons and a bit of resourcefulness you can create your own costume elegance for fall!

Giant rhinestones flash boldly across the fashion horizon; brightly irridescent metals in all the gleaming shades of precious Christmas tree ornaments, match the sheen of rustling, changeable taffetas; imported jets are burnished in gold or silver for additional beauty; pseudo opals offer a new way to that "jewel look" so typical of the Victorian mood. All of these—and many others—make up the button story for fall.

Proper Ways to Care for Piano

What is the proper way to care for a new piano (the inside, the plastic keys, the case)? C. M.

Here are a few points to remember in caring for your piano:

Never place a piano near a window. Sudden changes in temperature injure both tone and woodwork. If a piano is moved from one dwelling to another during the cold months of the year, never put it into a warm room. Let the room warm up gradually after the piano is moved in.

Never place a piano over a register or near a radiator, for the heat may dry and split the sounding board beyond repair.

Protect the piano from extremes of humidity if possible. Dry air is harmful, but a portable humidifier should not be placed too near the piano. Don't ever be misguided enough to place a pan of water inside the piano, as some homemakers have done to their sorrow. Dampness, as well as dryness, damages pianos.

The rich, gleaming exterior finish should be maintained in all its original beauty, but polishes and oils are not recommended. A soft, clean, untreated duster is generally the only cleaning agent needed. When necessary, wipe with a damp (not wet) chamois to brighten, then wring out chamois and rub the entire surface dry with it.

The yellowing of piano keys troubles many homemakers, but true ivory always yellows or darkens with age. Darkness hastens yellowing, so leave the keys exposed to light during the day. When necessary, clean ivory keys with a cloth moistened with denatured alcohol. Never use soap. It stains and darkens the ivory. Remember that excess moisture loosens the ivory from the key blocks.

What is the best way to clean pewter drinking goblets? S. P.

There are several metal polishes that are recommended for use on pewter. Usually, tarnish can be removed with one of these. However, for severe cases of tarnish, more drastic action is required. Some people use very fine steel wool or one of the squares of "fleece" now sold in some stores for cleaning purposes. Care must be taken not to damage the soft pewter in using either of these.

Can you give me information as to any European relief organization in or around Silver Spring to which I could devote two or three afternoons a week doing voluntary work, or any club with the aim of helping alleviate social or economic conditions abroad? D. P.

A number of churches collect used clothing for shipment overseas, and need people to help mend it, wrap bundles, etc. You may be able to locate such a clothing depot by telephoning churches in your neighborhood. Some of these depots are affiliated with Church World Service, Inc. The Church World Service office at 1317 G st., nw. (telephone National 4604) can give you the address of the one nearest you. Any other suggestions, readers? They will be appreciated.

How can I remove decals pasted on painted surfaces without injuring the paint? C. M.

Sponge decals with cloth wrung out in hot vinegar. Allow to stand for about 20 minutes, redampening occasionally with the vinegar. You should then be able to pull decals from the wall.

Where in Washington can I buy the tiny boxes of matches for 1 by 1½ inch silver match box covers? Before the war, I bought safety matches made at Tidaholm, Sweden, for the silver covers, but have not been able to find refills. D. J. M.

Some of the stores on a large local chain of supermarkets carry these small boxes of matches. You could find the address of the store nearest you by telephoning the main office of the concern at Atlantic 7480.

How can I remove red crayon marks from wallpaper? I have used a paste of starch and carbon tetrachloride, but the red marks still remain. W. F. S.

Although treatments such as the one you describe take the greasy stain from crayon out, it is practically impossible to remove all the color marks. Repeated spongings with dry cleaning fluid may lighten them, but you must be careful not to rub the paper hard.

Another thing that can be done is to bleach marks with a concentrated solution of household bleach, applied with a water color brush. Be sure not to apply enough of the liquid to run down the wall. Keep a clean blotter handy to blot away the excess. This treatment is apt to remove the color from the wall-paper, but the design can be filled in later with water color paints if necessary.

Many thanks to you readers who were kind enough to give me information about the "Original Clore Chairs," the ones I. C. M. asked about in Tuesday's paper. These chairs are made by Edward A. Clore & Sons, at Madison, Va. I am informed. The firm is open week-days only, from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.

I have an antelope skin black handbag. The bag became spotted and dirty. I attempted to wash it in soap and warm water, thinking this safe since the bag is a skin. The washing resulted in a dull, wrinkled finish, and appeared to remove the nap. Previously the bag had a high luster. What can I do to restore its original shape and luster? A. H. T.

I'd advise taking the handbag to one of the firms listed under "Leather Goods" in the yellow sections of the telephone book and seeing what a professional craftman can do to restore it. I doubt that you can accomplish much with home treatment at this point.

PETUNIA!

I press 'em—and fold 'em
And put 'em away—

My! I'm accomplishing
Wonders today!

But take a tip, Petunia! Your nice linen cloths and napkins will last a lot longer if you'll fold 'em different ways instead of always through the center. Constant creasing in the same place causes thin spots.

Hello, m'boy. We're returning this to the chicken coop. The audience is in no mood to purchase popcorn—
Aren't you going to act "Hamlet"?
Oh, my.
Bravo! CLAP!
How can I? That dog ran off with Yorick's skull! Listen! That irate audience is yelling for the author! It's surely not Shakespeare's fault.
CLAP! CLAP! Author! Author!
Now, where did you bury Mr. O'Malley's china skull?
He won't talk, Barnaby. Have some popcorn, Gus.
No, thank you.

'Chief Rain-in-the-Face' Does It Again

A friend of mine and I teed off together on Monday afternoon in the Press Club golf tournament at Prince Georges Country Club.

"Where's the rainstorm you promised your readers for today?" he asked as he scanned the clear blue skies.

"Don't worry," I muttered. "It'll be here."

"This is one time you're wrong," he replied, "and I'm glad you are. Because I've got to be home at 7 o'clock for dinner; we're having company, and my wife doesn't accept a mere rainstorm as a satisfactory excuse for being late under such circumstances."

I kept my peace, and we plodded through the burning heat on the front side, with no sign of rain. But on the tenth hole we began to see lightning, and on number 11 the rain broke in all its fury.

We took refuge in a shelter, where we found Frank Pace, jr., of 5126 Albemarle st. nw. (assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget) already watching the storm with baleful eye.

We waited five minutes, then five more. My partner began to fidget, and look at his wrist watch.

Finally he said: "Come on—let's get going. It can't last much longer."

Pace winced as three bolts of lightning chased each other about our heads for a few eternities, and the thunder came crashing into our ears. Peering out in the storm, he said:

"Why, you can't go out in that stuff, man. Do you see what's going on out there?"

"Yes, sir," said my partner firmly as he slung his bag over his shoulder, "I see it very plainly. It's lightning—and I'd much rather face lightning than a wife who has to serve a cold dinner to her guests."

If the newspaper business ever turns slack, I'm going to take my golf clubs out to the drought areas and make a fortune as a rainmaker.

PERSONAL NOTES

John W. Willis, 1728 Massachusetts ave. nw.: Sports Editor Bus Ham says that the NCAA's "sanity code" is a code of agreements providing for sane judgment in football relations. When I asked Bus whether it set a salary ceiling for amateurs he just sighed and murmured, "Go away. Far away."

ON BEING TRIMMED

Barbers are forever talking, and currently they're talking about raising the price of men's haircuts to $1.25.

Rebellious customers counter with the threat that they'll just wait an extra week or so between visits to the barber.

So it looks like a standoff. We'll be clipped less frequently, but more thoroughly.

MISCELLANY

Dr. F. Scott Avery of 1623 Massachusetts ave. nw. is drooling for some real old-fashioned salt-rising bread—"not the kind they sell these days, but the kind that was 'the toast of the town' when mother used to make it, back home in Michigan" . . . The bakeries are going to be indignant about your remarks, Doc, but the truth of the matter is that the stores can never sell stuff that's "as good as mother used to make" because we no longer retain that essential ingredient—a hungry child's appetite . . . Elaine Scharoff of 6323 Luzon ave. nw. says she has another candidate for our People Are Nicer Than Anybody Dept. He's Harry L. Cohen of 621 Powhatan pl. nw., who was in the 6000 block of 16th st. nw. when two out-of-town drivers stopped to ask for directions to the Shoreham. When Harry's explanation failed to register, he got into his own car and personally led them to the hotel . . . Pete Dickerson, one of CAB's accident investigators, is currently in New York for some hearings. After a couple of days in the Big Town he postcards: "Headaches seem to be a natural state of mankind hereabouts. Maybe this should be known as the aspirin age" . . . Mrs. Clara Davidson of 1309 N. 16th rd., Arlington, Va., confides that her biggest "headache" is the telephone salesman. "They used to peddle their wares from door to door; now it's from phone to phone" . . . Mrs. Laura J. Jackson of 2817 N. 23d st., Arlington, Va., says that she was washing dishes at the time, so the clanking crockery may have garbled Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher's usual "so long"—but nevertheless, when it emerged from the radio speaker it sounded like: "Until 9:15, this is Eddie Gallaher, with a short sarong" . . . If the FCC hears of this, our application for a television license is doomed!

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Canada Lee says he is through with politics, through with joining committees, and henceforth will devote all his time to the theater. Lee, the Negro former prizefighter who rose to Broadway stardom and who last year played the role of a white man, said: "There is more democracy in the theater than anywhere else" . . . When Howard Hawks sailed for England last week, he took with him steaks made from the steers he used in his new Western, "Red River" . . . Ferguson's Investigating Committee will go into the illegal export of items which required licensing.

Sir Laurence Olivier, whose "Hamlet" will rank among the greatest films ever made, tells of his early days when he was signed to play opposite Garbo in "Queen Christina." During the rehearsals Miss Garbo shrank from him in a love scene. The director suggested to him that perhaps he should become better acquainted with her. And so for long hours Olivier discussed Scandinavia, and the places he had visited near where Garbo was raised. Then they rehearsed again, and Olivier left and another actor was hired, because Garbo's sole reaction was to sigh "Life is such a funny thing."

Orson Welles' 11-year-old daughter, Christopher, appears with him in his new movie, "Macbeth." When she was born, Welles announced that he didn't want her to go into pictures until she was two, "because first I want her to have a normal childhood" . . . Serge Koussevitzky, rehearsing his orchestra at Tanglewood, tapped his baton and told his musicians: "Please, I want more pianissimo. That means 'More Less'" . . . An automobile man may be indicted within the month on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Jennie Tourel will appear with Conductor Leonard Bernstein, at the Palestine Philharmonic concert in Israel . . . An esthetic magazine invited Ernest Hemingway to contribute an article free, and assured him that he'd be aiding the cause of True Art. "I write for a living," Hemingway replied. "I am not an artist."

When Columbia was preparing its new Rita Hayworth movie, "Loves of Carmen," its researchers checked other dramatizations of the story. The Soviet version, they discovered, showed Carmen as a party organizer in Lodz; Don Jose became Captain Joseph, a renegade officer; and the man who finally conquered Carmen was a Polish wrestler . . . Pat Frank's new novel, "Affair of State," should hit the best-seller list . . . Sherman Billingsley who was raised near an Indian village in Oklahoma, was asked whether his Stork Club ever catered to Indians. "The last one," he said, "was the Maharajah of Indore."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Political Simmer Reaches Boil

(While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

The long-simmering political kettle has reached the boiling point.

On the national stage, the cooking will start next Monday when Harry Truman and Thomas Dewey formally square off before Labor Day audiences. Simultaneously, a number of equally exciting and significant State contests will be joined.

ALLEN

To the smart politicos, these local battles are second in importance only to the "big top" melee. For the politicos know that what happens in these State arenas will not only profoundly affect the national contest but the shape of things afterward.

The control of Congress, of powerful organizations in key States, and, in the event Truman loses, of the National Democratic machinery, are at stake in these tests.

Intensifying the concern of the political Generalissimos are two factors: The great body of "undecided" voters, manifest in every important poll; and the spectacular upset of Memphis Boss Crump by crusading Representative Estes Kefauver. To the professional politicos, these two items spell uncertainty. Anything can happen. The general public is itchy and new and fresher-sounding voices have a strong appeal.

Two graphic cases in point are Colorado and Wisconsin. In the former a militant young Democrat is aggressively challenging an old boss, and in the latter a two-fisted Progressive has an Old Guard Republican machine on the ropes.

Colorado Rodeo

The Colorado crusader is Eugene Cervi. A stocky, bustling, former newspaperman who was born in a miner's cabin, Cervi has set the State on its ear by his slashing campaign against Senator Ed Johnson.

The conservative Democratic boss of Colorado, Johnson, at 64, is seeking a third term in the Senate. Tall, hulking and slow in movement and speech, he was undecided for a long time whether to run. It's probable he now wishes he hadn't in view of the tough going he has encountered from Cervi.

The young militant has spared no punches. Throughout, Cervi has carried the fight to his old opponent. In speeches and snappy campaign literature, Cervi has raked Johnson from stem to stern with his own Old Guard voting record in the Senate. Cervi has dug up every vote cast by Johnson and is nailing him embarrassingly on them.

The battle is the toughest Johnson has had in his long career. His chances are very uncertain. Polls show a touch-and-go situation. Also, two years ago, contrary to the national trend, Colorado gave smashing majorities to liberal Democrats.

It looks bad for Johnson.

Badger Melee

Ralph M. Immell is making things equally unhappy for the Old Guard G. O. P. bosses in Wisconsin.

A tall, striking veteran of both World Wars and life-long Progressive, he has what looks like a winning grip on the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Like Cervi, Immell is aggressively carrying his fight to the opposition and mincing no words about them.

Naming names, Immell is blasting State G. O. P. leaders as reactionaries and advocating a detailed list of reforms. In his numerous speeches he is tellingly relating a Civil War episode to get over his point that a big change is needed in the State's management. This is Immell's story:

During one of General McClellan's long periods of inaction, Lincoln wrote him the following letter:

"Dear General:

"If you don't intend to use your Army, could I borrow it for a while."

Immell's biggest problem is overconfidence in his ranks. Obviously in the lead, his supporters may take too much for granted The G. O. P. machine is unquestionably scared and in trouble. But it's well-heeled and if the vote is light has a chance to skim through. Republican leaders are making no bones of their hopes for a light vote.

But if the vote comes out in force, it's in the bag for Immell.

Reminder

In a call on Senator Arthur Van-denberg, Rotterdam's Burgomeister Oud spoke of Holland's pride in prominent Americans of Dutch descent.

"In addition to you, Senator," he said, "there are Herbert Hoover, Congressman Harold Youngblood (Mich.) and Congressman Charles Hoeven (Iowa). They constitute a very impressive representation of Dutch Americans."

"Thank you, Mr. Mayor," Vandenberg said quietly, "but your list is incomplete. You overlooked Franklin D. Roosevelt."
